The mission of the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) is to continually enhance the professionalism of California law enforcement in serving its communities.

PREFACE

Government Code §1031 requires a pre-employment background investigation for peace officers; this requirement is further defined in Commission Regulation 1953. Similarly, Penal Code §13510 authorizes POST to establish minimum standards for public safety dispatchers; those standards – including a background investigation – are defined in Commission Regulations 1956-1960.

The POST Background Investigation Manual: Guidelines for the Investigator is intended to provide guidance to assist in satisfying these requirements and in otherwise ensuring that the background investigations of California peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates are thorough, lawful and effective. The manual was developed in conjunction with and in support of Commission regulations, personal history statements, and evaluation criteria, all of which are described herein.

Although these guidelines are detailed and comprehensive, this manual is intended as a resource rather than a replacement for adequate training and other needed forms of agency support for background investigators. This latest revision was prompted by a number of significant changes that took effect in 2009, including changes to POST Regulations concerning selection standards for peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates, as well as changes to California law regarding peace officer selection.

Comments and suggestions concerning these guidelines should be directed to your Regional Consultant.

Chapter 1

INTRODUCTION

The pre-employment background investigation satisfies two goals: 1) assuring compliance with all applicable minimum standards for appointment and 2) screening out candidates who, based on their past history or other relevant information, are found unsuitable for the positions in question. The express purpose of this manual is to assist background investigators — especially but not exclusively new investigators — in conducting investigations that satisfy both of these goals.

Backgrounds are among the most important investigations that a law enforcement agency will ever conduct. The manner in which a background investigation is conducted can make the difference between hiring an individual who will truly protect and serve versus someone who may cause harm to oneself, the agency, and society.

Background investigations are also among the most challenging investigations to conduct. They must be comprehensive if they are to lead to informed hiring decisions. Past misconduct and other signs of unsuitability must be uncovered so that dangerous or otherwise unfit candidates are screened out. At the same time, inquiries into past performance must stay within the tight parameters of fair employment practices. Furthermore, the areas investigated — and the evaluation of the resulting information — must be treated consistently across all candidates.

Background investigators must therefore be knowledgeable about all applicable local, state, and federal fair employment laws. They must be conversant in the legal requirements for appointment to the positions in question. They must heed all agency policies, practices, and operational limitations. They must base their inquiries and evaluations on candidate behaviors that have a direct relationship to the requirements and demands of the position, and they must do so with consistency and without bias. They must be able to articulate the information gathered from a wide variety of sources and how it is used in determining candidate suitability.

This manual is intended to assist background investigators in accomplishing this challenging task. The procedures and guidance presented here explain what information to gather, and how that information should be considered in determining candidate suitability.

FOCUS OF THE MANUAL

1. “Screen-out” vs. “Select-in” Orientation

POST has the responsibility for developing standards and assuring compliance with those standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. POST regulations mandate what must be done in order to satisfy the minimum standards for appointment. Therefore these guidelines are written from a “screen-out” rather than a “select-in” perspective; that is, they are designed to assist in identifying and weeding out the unfit, rather than distinguishing excellent candidates from those who just meet minimum qualifications. Agencies have the right to increase these standards as well as require additional standards.

2. Target Readership: Background Investigators

This manual was written expressly for background investigators. Although it may prove useful to others besides investigators, it is not intended as a comprehensive resource document for administrators, legal counsel, or others who are not directly involved in the conduct of background investigations.

Note: In California, third party background investigators (i.e., private contractors) must be Licensed Private Investigators¹ or attorneys. The actions of contract investigators are highly regulated by the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act (ICRA), Civil Code §1786. Because of the complexity of this area of law, the special procedures and requirements for non-agency investigators are not the focus of this manual. Contract investigators are strongly advised to seek out competent and professional training on ICRA.

3. Target Jobs: Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher

California law requires the completion of pre-employment background investigations for peace officers² and public safety dispatchers where the employing agency participates in the POST Public Safety Dispatcher Program.³ As POST has been charged with the responsibility for developing selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers, the focus of this manual is therefore limited to the conduct of background investigations on these two classifications. Local agency policy or regulation may require the completion of a pre-employment background on a host of other classifications of employment (e.g., secretarial support staff, records personnel, community service officers). Although some principles discussed here may be relevant regardless of classification, caution must be exercised when applying this guidance to classes of employment outside the mandate given POST. Agencies are urged to work in close consultation with their legal counsel guidance to classes of employment outside the mandate given POST. Agencies are urged to work in close consultation with their legal counsel.

³ Commission Regulation 1959

4. Not a Substitute for Training

This manual is not intended to serve as a substitute for competent, professional training. Although there is no background investigator training requirement, the proper training of employees is an employer's legal responsibility; furthermore, effective training of background investigators can greatly improve the quality of an agency's candidates. Background investigator professional associations — such as the California Background Investigators Association (CBIA) and the California Association of Law Enforcement Background Investigators (CALEBI) — also offer training as well as networking and related benefit.

5. Not Legal Advice

Although the manual contains discussions of the many pertinent employment laws and their impact on the conduct of the investigation, the information presented here should not be treated as legal research, legal opinion, or legal advice. Background investigators are strongly encouraged to consult, work closely with, and abide by the advice of their agency's legal counsel.

THE ROLE OF POST

POST serves a variety of functions with respect to the background investigation process. These functions include establishing selection standards, certifying training, providing technical assistance, and conducting compliance inspections.

1. Selection Standards

In response to specific mandates from the State Legislature, POST has been charged with the responsibility to develop selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. California regulatory agencies, such as POST, establish regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act. Once properly adopted, these regulations appear in the California Code of Regulations (Title 11, Division 9; formerly the California Administrative Code) and the POST Administrative Manual. As authorized by the State Legislature, these regulations carry the force of law and often seek to clarify or expand upon specific legislative enactments (laws), for example in the Penal or Government Codes.

Commission Regulations 1950-1955 contain the selection standards for peace officers. Commission Regulation 1953 includes the requirements for the conduct of the peace officer background investigation. The peace officer medical and psychological evaluation requirements are outlined in Regulations 1954 and 1955.

Commission Regulations 1956-1960 contain the selection standards for public safety dispatchers. Commission Regulations 1959 and 1960 include the requirements for the conduct of the public safety dispatcher background investigation, and the medical evaluation, respectively.

These standards are discussed in detail in Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework.” They are also located in the POST Administrative Manual (PAM).

2. Training Course Certification

POST certifies four courses specific to background investigations:

- 1) Background Core Training – A basic level of instruction designed for persons newly assigned to background investigation (32–40 hours).
- 2) Background Investigation Update – A more advanced level of instruction designed for experienced investigators who have already undergone core training and require update training (variable length).
- 3) Administration of the Background Process – A highly compressed training course designed for the supervisors and managers who oversee the background process, rather than for background investigators (8 hours).
- 4) Training Seminars/Conferences – Courses that are periodically certified or presented by POST to deal with unique circumstances or groups (variable length).

Other POST-certified courses, such as “Interview and Interrogation” or “Public Records and Open Sources for Investigators” may also prove helpful to background investigators.

3. Technical Assistance

POST professional support to the background investigation process includes:

- Publications – In addition to this manual, POST produces manuals on interviewing peace officer candidates, conducting medical screening, psychological screening, and a background investigation course curriculum document. Some of these manuals are not specifically written for the background investigator; however, they can provide technical guidance to others involved in the hiring process.
- Forms and Other Screening Documents – Such as the Personal History Statements (POST 2-251–Peace Officer and 2-255–Public Safety Dispatcher⁴), Medical History Statements (POST 2-252–Peace Officer and 2-264–Public Safety Dispatcher), and Medical Examination Reports (POST 2-253–Peace Officer and 2-265–Public Safety Dispatcher).
- Consultative Services (through its own professional staff) – Investigators should feel free to contact their POST Regional Consultants.
- Referrals (including best practices already in use by other agencies and/or individuals).

4. Compliance Inspections

The Legislature has charged POST with the responsibility to conduct compliance inspections to verify that persons appointed as peace officers were selected in accordance with the selection standards. POST Regional Consultants make regular visits to the agencies in their jurisdictions to inspect the background investigations completed on those who have been hired since the last audit. If deficiencies are detected, they work with the agency by suggesting methods for correction and establishing a timetable for correction. A follow-up visit may be scheduled to assure that the deficiencies are corrected. Consequences may be invoked if agencies resist or fail to correct problems within a reasonable period of time. Chapter 6, “POST Compliance Inspections,” discusses the compliance inspection process.

POST VS. AGENCY CANDIDATE SCREENING CRITERIA

The selection standards imposed by state statutes and POST regulations are minimum standards. Agencies are free to establish more rigorous selection criteria, as long as they are job-related and legally defensible. For example, agencies may choose to require peace officers to be at least 21 years of age, even though state law permits their appointment at age 18. It is also not uncommon for agencies to require peace officer candidates to have earned some college credits, although none is specified under the law.⁵

Verifying most of the statutory and regulatory minimum qualification standards, such as age, citizenship, and absence of felony convictions, is relatively clear-cut. However, California Government Code §1031\(d\) also requires all peace officer candidates to be screened for “good moral character.” What prior conduct constitutes good moral character (or, more importantly, the absence thereof)?

The POST background dimensions, presented in the next chapter, are intended to assist agencies and investigators in answering this question by identifying and detailing the attributes underlying moral character and other qualities essential to the jobs of peace officer and public safety dispatcher. Nevertheless, it is ultimately up to each agency to establish its own clearly articulated legally defensible standards of conduct.

ORGANIZATION OF THE MANUAL

The remainder of this manual is divided into five sections. The next chapter, “Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Dimensions,” provides a common set of peace officer and dispatcher attributes that must be considered during the conduct of the background investigation. Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework,” details the statutory and regulatory requirements surrounding background investigations. The next two chapters approach the background investigation from different perspectives: Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process,” describes the chronology of the investigation; while Chapter 5, “Areas of Investigation and POST Personal History Statements,” presents a topic-by-topic explanation of the process, using the Personal History Statement as its framework. Lastly, Chapter 6, “POST Compliance Inspections,” is intended to clarify (as well as demystify) the procedure, expectations, and common problems detected during the annual POST audit.

⁵ In the case of public safety dispatchers there is no educational minimum specified in state law for employment.

Chapter 2

PEACE OFFICER AND PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION DIMENSIONS

Job-relatedness is the cornerstone of every lawful, effective candidate screening procedure. The demonstrated necessity of every pre-employment inquiry for evaluating the skills, abilities, and attributes required for effective job performance is critical to ensuring that those selected are qualified, and serves as a strong defense against allegations of unfairness or discrimination.

Job-relatedness, or “validity,” is characteristic of selection procedures that are derived from an analysis of the job and its requirements and demands. POST has conducted repeated statewide job analyses on both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. In conjunction with the creation of this manual, job analytic data on these two positions were reanalyzed in order to derive a new set of essential attributes of peace officers and public safety dispatchers. Many sources of information were reviewed and reanalyzed, as described in Appendix A, “Development of POST Background Investigation Dimensions.”

Based on these analyses, one common set of background dimensions was created for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. These ten dimensions are listed in Table 2.1. Commission Regulations 1953\(b\) and 1959\(b\) stipulate that the ten background dimensions shall be considered in the conduct of every peace officer/public safety dispatcher investigation. The dimensions are organized into five major categories (Moral Character, Handling Stress and Adversity, Work Habits, Interactions with Others, and Intellectually-Based Abilities).

Although these background investigation dimensions were selected based on their specific amenability to assessment during the background investigation, a number of them are also evaluated elsewhere in the selection process. For example, “Integrity” is assessed at several other pre-employment stages, such as during the hiring interview and psychological screening. This redundancy is intentional, as it serves to highlight the interdependence of these selection criteria as well as enhance the measurement accuracy of important peace officer and public safety dispatcher character attributes.

Each dimension includes a behaviorally based definition and description, along with a set of indicators for use by background investigators in evaluating candidates against these attributes. Note, however, that specific thresholds of acceptability (e.g., number of allowable moving violations) are not included. The establishment of tolerance levels is an agency’s prerogative, and may well vary between peace officers and public safety dispatchers.

Although it is not necessary for each background report to include a separate evaluation of the candidate on each of the ten dimensions, they should serve as points of focus for the background investigation itself, as well as for issues to be considered when preparing the final report.

Agencies are strongly encouraged to establish standards associated with such issues as criminal convictions, thefts, illegal drug use and other criminal conduct, and driving history. If these issues have not been addressed, background investigators are faced with the need to continuously consult the chain of command every time they encounter negative information. This slows the process and may expose the department to liability in the event that inconsistent and/or inappropriate standards are applied.

Investigators must also exercise caution not to impose their own personal beliefs and/or prejudices as the benchmark against which to measure character, especially if the agency has not defined its own standards. To be defensible, agency standards must be job-related and consistent with business necessity; moreover, overly demanding selection requirements further reduce an already-shrinking applicant pool.

No amount of standard-setting, however, will eliminate the need to make case-by-case judgments based on specific facts presented by each candidate's background. Rarely is one fact a sufficient basis for disqualifying an individual; rather, it is generally necessary to investigate the circumstances surrounding each fact in order to make an educated assessment of the candidate's suitability, taking into consideration such factors as:

- The patterns of past behavior and specific combinations of fact and circumstances,
- The consequences if past undesirable behavior occurs again or becomes generally known,
- The likelihood of recurrence of the undesirable behavior,
- The relevance of the past behavior to the job demands and requirements,
- The length of time between the particular undesirable act and the application for employment, with consideration given to the intervening behavior of the candidate, and
- The legal rights of the candidate.

The use of these dimensions in organizing and supporting the investigators' observations and findings is discussed in Step 9, Report and Background Packet Preparation in Chapter 4, "The Background Investigation."

MORAL CHARACTER

1. Integrity. This involves maintaining high standards of personal conduct. It consists of attributes such as honesty, impartiality, trustworthiness, and abiding by laws, regulations, and procedures. It includes:

- ✓ Not abusing the system nor using one's position for personal gain; not yielding to temptations of bribes, favors, gratuities, or payoffs
- ✓ Not bending rules or otherwise trying to beat the system
- ✓ Not sharing or releasing confidential information
- ✓ Not engaging in illegal or immoral activities – either on or off the job
- ✓ Honest and impartial in dealings with others both in and outside the agency
- ✓ Not condoning or ignoring unethical/illegal conduct in others
- ✓ Truthful and honest sworn testimony, affidavits, and in all dealings with others

INDICATORS:

- Dishonesty in the hiring process, including:
 - deliberately misstating or misrepresenting identifying information or qualifications, whether orally or in writing
 - misleading any person involved in the pre-employment screening process by misstating, misrepresenting, or failing to completely answer questions
 - inaccuracies or deliberate omissions in applications, Personal History Statements, or any other documentation required as part of the pre-employment process used to help determine the candidate's suitability for employment
 - any other act of deceit or deception
- Lying about past mistakes or oversights
- Fraudulently reporting or other abuses/misuses of employer leave policies (e.g., sick leave, vacation, bereavement leave)
- Abuses privileges and benefits of the job (e.g., overtime, use of supplies, equipment, internet access)
- Involved in the sale or distribution of illegal drugs
- Engages in inappropriate sexual activity (e.g., prostitutes, sex with minors, etc.)
- Evidence of perjury, signing of false affidavits in any criminal or civil proceeding, falsification of official reports including statements, narratives, property documents, evidentiary documents, giving incomplete or misleading information to supervisors
- Cheating, plagiarism, or other forms of academic dishonesty
- Attempting to induce others to give false information
- Association with those who commit crimes or otherwise demonstrate unethical/immoral behavior

- Commits illegal or immoral activities that would be offensive to contemporary community standards of propriety
- Commits crimes against employers — arson, burglary, stealing (goods, money, or services) — which would amount to a felony
- Conviction(s) of any criminal offense classified as a misdemeanor under California Law, especially as an adult
- Having an outstanding warrant of arrest at time of application for job or throughout the hiring process
- Admission of having committed any act amounting to a felony under California Law, as an adult
- Admission of any criminal act, whether misdemeanor or felony, committed against children, including, but not limited to: molesting or annoying children, child abduction, child abuse, lewd and lascivious acts with a child, indecent exposure (except acts of consensual unlawful intercourse accomplished between two minors, unless more than four years difference in age existed at the time of the acts)
- Actions resulting in civil lawsuits against the candidate or his/her employer
- Committing acts that, had they been detected, would have resulted in prosecution and conviction and would have automatically disqualified the candidate.

While Employed in a Position of Public Trust:

- Conviction of any offense classified as a misdemeanor under California Law while employed as a peace officer (including military police)
- Admission of administrative conviction of any act while employed as a peace officer, including military police, involving lying, falsification of any official report or document, or theft
- Admission of administrative conviction or criminal conviction for failure to properly report witnessed criminal conduct committed by another law enforcement officer
- Accepting or soliciting any bribe or gratuity while in a position of public trust
- Embezzlement of money, goods or services while in a position of trust

- 2. Impulse Control/Attention to Safety. Avoiding impulsive and/or unnecessarily risky behavior to ensure the safety of oneself and others. It includes thinking before acting, taking proper precautions, keeping one's impetuous, knee-jerk reactions in check, and behaving in conscious regard for the larger situation at hand.

INDICATORS:

Safe Driving Practices

- Receipt of multiple moving violations (especially for potential life-threatening acts such as reckless driving, speed contest, etc.)
- Driver in multiple chargeable collisions. Numerous moving and non-moving violations, at-fault accidents
- Instances of road rage, driving recklessly and/or at excessive speeds

Attention to Safety

- Fails to take proper precautions to minimize risks associated with hazardous activities
- Takes unnecessary, foolish risks
- Disregards risk to self or others

Impulse/Anger Control

- Overreacts when challenged or criticized
- Unnecessarily confrontational in interactions with others
- Reacts childishly or with anger to criticism or disappointment
- Disciplined by any employer as an adult for fighting in the workplace
- Admission of any act of domestic violence as an adult
- Use of verbal or physical abuse or violence toward others
- Violent assault upon another, including spousal battery, sexual battery, or other acts of violence
- Admission of administrative conviction or criminal convictions for any act amounting to assault under color of authority or any other violation of federal or state civil rights laws
- Instances of reprimands, counseling, terminations, suspensions for poor behavioral control at work

- 3. Substance Abuse and Other Risk-Taking Behavior. This involves engaging in behavior that is inappropriate, self-damaging, and with potential adverse impact on the agency, and includes alcohol and drug abuse, domestic violence, sale of drugs and gambling.

INDICATORS:

- Illegal use or possession of a controlled substance while employed in any law enforcement capacity, including military police
- Drug test of the candidate, during the course of the hiring process, where illegal controlled substances are detected
- Illegal or unauthorized use of prescription medications
- Illegal use or possession of a controlled substance while a student enrolled in college-accredited courses related to the criminal justice field
- Manufacturing, cultivating, transporting, brokering, or selling any controlled substances
- Record of alcohol or drug-related incidents, including driving under the influence or such charge reduced to reckless driving, violation of open container laws or transporting open containers
- History of other problems associated with drug and/or alcohol use
- Perpetrator of domestic violence incidents

- Missed work due to alcohol use
 - Alcohol use while on the job (where prohibited)
 - Arriving at work intoxicated/smelling of alcohol or hung-over
 - Gambling to the point of causing harm to oneself

HANDLING STRESS AND ADVERSITY

4. Stress Tolerance. Maintaining composure, particularly during time-critical emergency events and other stressful situations, weathering negative events and circumstances and maintaining an even temperament and positive attitude. Accepting criticism without becoming overly defensive or allowing it to hamper behavior or job performance.

INDICATORS:

Attitude and Temperament

- Worries excessively; enters into new situations with considerable apprehension
- Overly suspicious and distrusting in dealing with others
- Argumentative, antagonistic towards others, bully
- Commonly behaves with hostility and anger
- Behavior-impairing mood swings
- Badmouths employers and others
- Unnecessarily confrontational and aggressive
- Disrupts/undermines authority (fails to successfully carry out directives; shows signs of contempt by eye rolling, excessive exhaling, etc.)

Stress Tolerance and Recovery

- Comes “unglued,” freezes, or otherwise performs ineffectively when feeling overloaded or stressed
- Uncontrollable reaction to verbal abuse from others
- Reacts childishly or with anger to criticism or disappointment
- Allows personal problems and stressors to bleed into behavior on the job

Accepting Responsibility for Mistakes

- Does not accept responsibility for actions and mistakes; routinely makes excuses or blames others for own shortcomings
- Becomes excessively defensive or otherwise overreacts when challenged or criticized
- Minimizes the importance of past mistakes or errors
- Refuses to accept responsibility for mistakes or improper actions

5. Confronting and Overcoming Problems, Obstacles, and Adversity. This involves willingness and persistence in confronting problems and personal adversity. It includes taking control of situations, as necessary and demonstrating hustle and drive in reaching goals.

INDICATORS:

- Displays submissiveness and insecurity when confronted with challenges, threatening situations, or difficult problems
- Fails to take action or change behavior to resolve problems or mistakes
- Multiple personal bankruptcies, having current financial obligations for which legal obligations have not been satisfied; or any other flagrant history of financial instability
- Allows debts to mount; evades creditors, collection agencies, etc.
- Past due accounts, discharged debts, late payments, collection accounts, civil judgments, and/or bankruptcy
- Fails to meet obligations (for example, auto insurance, auto registration, selective service registration, IRS requirements, child support obligations)
- Fails to exercise fiscal responsibility commensurate with income

WORK HABITS

6. Conscientiousness. Diligent, reliable, conscientious work patterns; performing in a timely, logical manner in accordance with rules, regulations, and organizational policies.

INDICATORS:

Dependability/Reliability

- Fails to meet commitments to work, school, family, volunteer, or community activities
- Poor attendance; takes time off from work unnecessarily (e.g., on/near weekends)
- History of being late to work, meetings, appointments
- Misses scheduled appointment during the process without prior permission
- Excessively long breaks, returning from lunch late, leaving work early
- Fails to comply with instructions or orders
- Fails to properly prepare for meetings

Personal Accountability and Responsibility

- Is not accountable for his/her performance
- Blames others for improper actions
- Fails to analyze prior mistakes or problems to improve performance

- Disciplined by any employer (including military) for gross insubordination, dereliction of duty, or persistent failure to follow established policies and regulations
 - History of involuntary dismissal (for any reason other than lay-off)
 - Conducts unauthorized personal business while on duty
 - Failure to exercise fiscal responsibility commensurate with income
 - Past due accounts, discharged debts, late payments, collection accounts, civil judgments, and/or bankruptcy
 - History of flagrant financial instability, such as multiple personal bankruptcies, financial obligations for which legal judgments have not been satisfied, etc.
 - Failure to meet obligations (for example, auto insurance, auto registration, selective service registration, IRS requirements, child support obligations)

Safeguarding and Maintaining Property, Equipment, and Belongings

- Fails to safeguard property entrusted to him/her
- Fails to maintain equipment
- Loses valuable information

Orderliness, Thoroughness, and Attention to Detail

- Pattern of disorganization in work, school, etc.
- Fails to attend to details (e.g., typos, missing/incorrect information)
- Fails to attend to all aspects of projects and activities to be sure they are completed
- Motor vehicle collisions due to inattentiveness
- Overlooks or misinterprets instructions on PHS and other documents
- Fails to properly recall instructions/directions provided previously
- Cannot properly recall pertinent/important details related to personal history
- Problems at school, work, driving due to poor attention/vigilance

Initiative and Drive

- Gives up in the face of long hours or other difficult working conditions
- Fails to keep current on new rules, procedures, etc.
- Does not initiate proper action unless given explicit instructions
- Fails to ensure that the job is performed correctly
- Procrastinates
- Watches the clock rather than attending to task accomplishment
- Gives up or cuts corners when faced with obstacles
- Performs job duties in a perfunctory manner, expending minimum amount of effort

General Conscientiousness

- Resigns without notice (except where the presence of a hostile work environment is alleged)
- Resigns in lieu of termination (except where a hostile work environment is alleged)
- Holds multiple paid positions with different employers within a relatively brief period of time (excluding military, and students who attend school away from their permanent legal residence)
 - Reprimanded or counseled for poor work performance (including military service)
- Terminated or suspended from work (other than honorable discharge from military)
- Released from probationary employment status except for reduction in force
- Poor record of academic achievement

INTERACTIONS WITH OTHERS

- 7. Interpersonal Skills. This involves interacting with others in a tactful and respectful manner, and showing sensitivity, concern, tolerance, and interpersonal effectiveness in one's daily interactions.

INDICATORS:

Social Sensitivity (the ability to “read” people and awareness of the impact of one’s own words and behavior on others)

- Provokes others by officious bearing, gratuitous verbal challenge, or through physical contact
- Antagonizes others
- Uses profanity and other inappropriate language
- Incidents of domestic violence, use of verbal or physical abuse, or violence toward others
- Use of physical force to resolve disputes
- Demonstrated overreaction to criticism

Social Interest and Concern (interest and concern for others)

- Baits people; takes personal offense at comments, insults, or criticism
- Evidence of inability to get along with others in work or personal life
- Makes rude and/or condescending remarks to or about others
- Source of customer/citizen complaints
- Argumentative, loner, bully

Tolerance (lack of tact and impartiality in treating all members of society)

- Makes hasty, biased judgments based on physical appearance, race, gender, or other group membership characteristics
- Refuses to listen to explanations of others
- Inability to recognize how one's own emotions/behavior affect situations and others
- Having been disciplined by any employer (including the military and/or any law enforcement training facility) for acts constituting racial, ethnic, or sexual harassment or discrimination
- During the hiring/background process, uttering any epithet derogatory of another person's race, religion, gender, national origin, or sexual orientation
- Makes inappropriate comments to or about others regarding personal characteristics as well as derogatory comments about specific groups (racial, gender, sexual orientation, proficiency with the English language, immigrant status, HIV/AIDS infection, religion, transgender, social status)
- Evidence of the use of derogatory stereotypes in jokes or daily language
- Sexual harassment/hostile work environment incidents

Social Self Confidence/Persuasiveness (inability and discomfort approaching individuals, and in confronting and reducing interpersonal conflict)

- Avoids confrontations at all costs
- Intimidated by others
- Minimizes or avoids interactions with others
- Escalates situations by overreacting
- Fails to diplomatically offer ideas or persuade others to adopt desired course of action
- Disruptive/challenging to authority
- Use of harassment, threats, or intimidation to gain an advantage
- Succumbs to peer pressure

Teamwork (inability to work effectively as a member of a team)

- Resents successes and accomplishments of team members
- Does not assist or request assistance from team members
- Alienates colleagues by dominating interactions and activities
- Gossips, criticizes, and backstabs colleagues and coworkers
- Fails to achieve or maintain trust with peers, supervisors, and clients

INTELLECTUALLY-BASED ABILITIES

- 8. Decision-Making and Judgment. The ability to make timely, sound decisions, especially in dangerous, pressure-filled situations, and/or where information is incomplete and/or conflicting. Able to size up situations quickly to determine appropriate action. It also involves the ability to sift through information to glean that which is important and, once identified, to use that information effectively.

INDICATORS:

Situation/Problem Analysis

- Unable to step into a situation and figure out what probably led up to that point in time, as well as what is likely to happen as the situation unfolds
- Tunnel vision; does not see the big picture when analyzing information
- Fails to identify patterns and implications when analyzing information
- Failure to consider available information or appropriate options
- Naive, overly trusting, easily duped
- Spends too much time on minor issues; unable to set priorities

Adherence to Policies and Regulations

- Failure to consider organizational policies and regulations when making decisions
- Fails to use appropriate judgment and discretion in applying regulations and policies; cannot distinguish between the letter and the spirit of rules and laws
- Rigid adherence to rules without consideration of alternative information; needs directives to be in black and white

Response Appropriateness

- Poor judgment in knowing when to confront — and when to back away from — potentially volatile situations
- Overbearing approach to resolving problems
- Escalates problems by under or over-reacting
- Uses force when unnecessary or inappropriate
- Indecision or poor decisions when options are not clear-cut
- Paralyzed by uncertainty or ambiguity; insecure about making a decision

Response Assessment

- Unable or unwilling to make “midcourse corrections” on initial course of action when presented with new information or when circumstances change
- Fails to apply lessons learned from past mistakes

- 9. Learning Ability. Ability to comprehend and retain a good deal of information, to recall factual information, and to apply what is learned.

INDICATORS:

- Dismissal or probation from school, or other indication(s) of poor academic performance
- Dismissal from a POST-certified Basic Academy, and no subsequent effort to improve in the deficient areas
- Pattern of making repeated mistakes when faced with similar problems and negative situations, in and outside of learning environments

- 10. Communication Skills. Ability to make oneself understood, both orally and in writing.

INDICATORS:

Oral Communication

- Speech is difficult to understand
- Responses to questions are rambling, confused, and/or disorganized
- Expresses thoughts and emotions inappropriately through facial gesture and body language
- Discussions of topics are incomplete, inappropriate, and/or filled with a lot of unnecessary/irrelevant details
- Fails to understand both explicit and implied messages and responds accordingly
- Does not listen well, thereby missing the point of what others are saying

Written Communication

- Illegible handwriting
- Poor grammar, punctuation, and/or spelling
- Written communications are incomplete, disorganized, unclear, and/or inaccurate
- Written responses to Personal History Statement items are inappropriate, incomplete, or otherwise difficult to decipher

Intentionally blank

Chapter 3

LEGAL QUALIFICATIONS AND STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

The background investigation of peace officers and public safety dispatchers is one part of a larger pre-employment screening process dictated by California law and POST regulations. In addition to the background investigation, the process must include a written examination, hiring interview, medical examination, and (for peace officers) a psychological examination. The statutory and regulatory requirements – particularly those that have an impact on the conduct of background investigations – for screening peace officers and public safety dispatchers are reviewed here.

OVERVIEW OF PRE-EMPLOYMENT SCREENING REQUIREMENTS

The selection standards for peace officers and public safety dispatchers are summarized below. The codes and regulations discussed here are included in Table 3.1 (located at the end of this chapter).

Peace Officers

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS

Government Code §1031 establishes minimum selection standards for peace officers. It includes minimum criteria on citizenship, age, and education. It also requires that applicants be fingerprinted as part of the search of local, state, and national files to disclose any criminal record, and be found to be of good moral character as determined by a thorough background investigation. These requirements, which form the basis for the background investigation, are discussed in detail in Chapter 5, “Areas of Investigation and Personal History Statements.”

Government Code §1031(f) also stipulates that peace officers must be found free of any physical, emotional, or mental condition that might adversely affect the exercise of the powers of a peace officer.

GC §1029\(A\)\(B\) stipulate that individuals who have been convicted of a felony, as well as felony-level and felony-related offenses, are prohibited from becoming peace officers. These convictions form the basis for the fingerprint clearance from the California Department of Justice. Juvenile convictions, even those that would amount to a felony as an adult, are not covered under Government Code §1029, and are therefore not an automatic bar to appointment as a peace officer.

Penal Code §29805 and U.S. Code Title 18 §922\(d\)\(9\) both involve bans on possession of a firearm. PC §29805 includes a list of misdemeanors that result in a ten-year firearm ban. These convictions form the basis for the firearms clearance from the California Department of Justice.

U.S. Code Title 18 §922(d)(9) stipulates that individuals who have been convicted of misdemeanor offenses containing elements of domestic violence cannot possess a firearm, and forms the basis for the firearms clearance issued by the FBI.

In their fingerprint returns, the California DOJ and the FBI stipulate the eligibility of the candidate based on GC §1029; therefore, background investigators need not necessarily concern themselves with the details of this statute. The California DOJ and the FBI will stipulate the eligibility of the candidate to possess a firearm; DOJ submits a firearms clearance separately from the general fingerprint return.

GC §1031.1 establishes procedures by which employers are legally obligated to furnish specified information in a peace officer pre-employment background investigation. GC 1031.1 is discussed in Chapter 5, “PHS Section 5: Experience and Employment.”

GC §1031.2, which took effect on January 1, 2009, allows the post-offer collection of certain non-medical and non-psychological information during the peace officer background investigation if it was not reasonable to collect the information prior to the conditional offer of employment. The implications of this new statute are discussed later in this chapter and in Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process.”

GC §1031.5 serves as an amendment to the citizenship requirements of GC 1031, stipulating that in order for resident aliens to achieve or maintain peace officer eligibility, citizenship status must be conferred within three years of application for citizenship. Citizenship requirements are discussed in Chapter 5, “PHS Section 1: Personal.”

REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS

Old Standards	New Standards
Regulation 1002	Regulations 1950 thru 1955
Procedure C-1	Regulation 1953
Procedure C-2	Regulations 1954 and 1955

Revised POST peace officer selection standards became effective on July 1, 2009. A summary of the POST regulatory changes, both substantive and editorial, are listed in Table 3.2 at the end of this chapter.

The POST peace officer selection requirements consist of:

- Regulation 1950: General Requirements
- Regulation 1951: Reading and Writing Ability Assessment
- Regulation 1952: Oral Interview

- Regulation 1953: Background Investigation
 - Regulation 1954: Medical Evaluation
 - Regulation 1955: Psychological Evaluation

Regulation 1950\(a\): Selection Requirements specify who is covered by (and who is exempted from) Regulations 1951-1955. As indicated in 1950, all peace officer candidates are covered by these regulations, regardless of prior law enforcement experience either at the same department or at a different department within the same city, county, state, or district. However, the following candidates are exempt from these requirements:

- (1) Peace officers who change penal code classifications (e.g., from reserve to regular officer), assuming documentation exists showing that all current requirements were met, and the officer has worked continuously in the department since the time of initial appointment; and
- (2) Peace officers whose department is merged with another department in the same city, county, state, or district, assuming documentation exists showing that all current requirements were met, and the officer has worked continuously in the department since the time of initial appointment.

For peace officers who are mandatorily reinstated (as a result of a personnel hearing, arbitration, court decision, etc.), POST requires that the department: (A) resubmit fingerprints to DOJ and FBI (unless these agencies were never informed of the officer's separation from the department), and (B) perform a new DMV check.⁶

POST selection requirements must be satisfied prior to the date of appointment as a peace officer. Other specifics, including time limits and transferability of results, are discussed in each regulation.

Regulation 1951: Reading and Writing Ability Assessment specifies the options available for demonstrating that peace officer (including reserve officer) candidates possess adequate written communication skills.

Regulation 1952: Oral Interview specifies the requirements of the oral interview, including the six POST Interview Factors that must be addressed.

Regulation 1953: Background Investigation specifies the requirements for the conduct of the background investigation, including evaluation criteria, required forms, areas of investigation, background investigation updates, and documentation and reporting. These regulations are detailed later in this chapter.

Regulation 1954: Medical Evaluation specifies medical evaluator qualifications, timing of the medical evaluation, medical screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of medically disqualified candidates.

Regulation 1954\(e\): Medical Evaluation Report stipulates that the medical evaluation report is to be maintained in the candidate's background investigation file and must include: (A) the physician's contact information and medical license number; (B) the candidate's name; (C) the date the evaluation was completed; and (D) a signed statement affirming that the evaluation was conducted in accordance with POST regulations, and a determination of the candidate’s medical suitability.

The information required in the Medical Evaluation Report is not medical; therefore it is lawful to include it in the background file. However, any additional information provided by the physician that is medical must be kept separate and confidential. Information from the physician - medical and otherwise - may be communicated to the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process, if it is relevant to their respective determinations of candidate suitability.

Regulation 1955: Psychological Evaluation requirements mirror the requirements in Regulation 1954 (Medical Evaluation), including specifying psychological evaluator qualifications, timing of the evaluation, psychological screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of psychologically disqualified candidates.

The psychological evaluation reporting requirements [Regulation 1955(e)] are identical to those discussed above for Regulation 1954(e): Medical Evaluation Report.

Public Safety Dispatchers

STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS

Penal Code §13510\(c\) authorizes POST to establish minimum standards for recruiting and training public safety dispatchers working in agencies that participate in the POST program. In contrast to peace officer standards, there are no statutory minimum age, education, or citizenship requirements specific to public safety dispatchers, no statutory requirements related to felony or misdemeanor convictions, and no requirement to conduct psychological screening.

REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS

Old Standards	New Standards
Regulation 1018(c)	Regulations 1956 thru 1960
Procedure C-1	Regulation 1959

Revised POST public safety dispatcher selection standards became effective on July 1, 2009. A summary of the regulatory changes, both substantive and editorial, are listed in Table 3.3 at the end of this chapter.

The POST public safety dispatcher selection requirements consist of:

- Regulation 1956: General Requirements
- Regulation 1957: Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities Assessment
- Regulation 1958: Oral Communication Assessment
- Regulation 1959: Background Investigation
- Regulation 1960: Medical Evaluation

Regulation 1956: General Requirements specifies who is covered by (and who is exempted from) these standards. All public safety dispatcher “candidates” are subject to Regulations 1957-1960, regardless of prior public safety dispatcher experience either at the same department or at a different department within the same city, county, state, or district, or whether they are applying for a full-time or part-time position. However, dispatchers who are employed by a department that is merged with another department in the same city, county, state, or district are not subject to these requirements, as long as documentation exists showing that all current requirements were met, and the dispatcher has worked continuously in the department since the time of hire.

For public safety dispatchers who are mandatorily reinstated (as a result of a personnel hearing, arbitration, court decision, etc.), the department must resubmit fingerprints to DOJ and FBI, unless these agencies were never informed of the dispatcher’s separation from the department.

Peace officers who are assigned to dispatcher duties are not subject to POST Regulations 1957-1960.

POST selection requirements must be satisfied prior to the date of appointment as a public safety dispatcher. Other specifics, including time limits and transferability of results, are discussed in each regulation.

Regulation 1957: Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities Assessment specifies the options available for demonstrating that dispatcher candidates have adequate verbal, reasoning, memory, and perceptual abilities.

Regulation 1958: Oral Communication Assessment stipulates that the oral communication abilities of public safety dispatcher candidates must be assessed prior to a conditional offer of employment.

Regulation 1959: Background Investigation specifies the requirements for the conduct of the background investigation, including evaluation criteria, required forms, areas of investigation, background investigation updates, and documentation and reporting. These regulations are detailed later in this chapter.

Regulation 1960: Medical Evaluation specifies medical evaluator qualifications, timing of the medical evaluation, medical screening procedures and evaluation criteria, required sources of information, and the second opinion rights of medically disqualified candidates.

Regulation 1960\(e\): Medical Evaluation Report stipulates that the medical evaluation report is to be maintained in the candidate’s background investigation file and must include: (A) the physician’s contact information and medical license number; (B) the candidate’s name; (C) the date the evaluation was completed; and (D) a signed statement affirming that the evaluation was conducted in accordance with POST regulations, and a determination of the candidate’s medical suitability.

The information required in the Medical Evaluation Report is not medical; therefore, it is lawful to include it in the background file. However, any additional information provided by the physician that is medical must be kept separate and confidential. Information from the physician - medical and otherwise - may be communicated to the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process, if it is relevant to their respective determinations of candidate suitability.

There are no psychological evaluation requirements for public safety dispatchers.

POST BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION REGULATIONS: PEACE OFFICERS (1953) AND PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHERS (1959)

As of July 1, 2009, peace officer background investigation requirements are contained in Commission Regulation 1953; public safety dispatcher requirements are included in Commission Regulation 1959. Regulations 1953 and 1959 serve to replace Commission Regulation 1002 (Peace Officers), Regulation 1018(c) (Public Safety Dispatchers) and Procedure C-1 (Background Investigation Procedures for Peace Officers and Dispatchers).

Many of the changes in the July 2009 background investigation requirements are editorial in nature, consistent with the goal of enhancing readability and clarifying common regulatory misinterpretations. However, there are several substantive differences between the previous and current versions. In particular, there is a closer alignment between the requirements for peace officers and public safety dispatchers; many of the recommended areas of investigation for public safety dispatcher candidates are now required. Any remaining differences in the background investigation requirements of peace officers and public safety dispatchers are the result of statutory differences between the two classifications (for example, GC §1029 prohibits convicted felons from becoming peace officers, but there is no equivalent statutory prohibition for dispatchers).

The background investigation regulations are summarized below. The descriptions note changes reflected in the July 2009 standards, similarities or differences between peace officers and public safety dispatcher regulations, and the location of where the regulation is discussed in more detail elsewhere in the Manual.

Background Investigation Evaluation Criteria Commission Regulations 1953(b) and 1959(b)

The POST Background Investigation Dimensions described and discussed in Chapter 2: “Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions” must now be considered in the conduct of every peace officer and public safety dispatcher background investigation.

Personal History Statements Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c)

Applicants must complete a Personal History Statement - POST 2-251 for Peace Officers; POST 2-255 for Public Safety Dispatchers, or an alternative questionnaire covering the same areas of investigation. See Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statement.”

Collection of Background Information – Pre- and Post-Conditional Offer of Employment Commission Regulations 1953(d) and 1959(d)

In accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), no medical or other disability-related inquiries may be made during a background investigation that is conducted prior to a conditional offer of employment (pre-offer).

Background investigators may, under certain circumstances, make non-medical and non-psychological inquiries after a conditional offer of employment has been extended. Guidance on sequencing the background investigation in compliance with the ADA and FEHA is provided later in this chapter and in Chapter 4, “The Background Investigation Process.”

At the post-offer stage, background investigators must interact with screening psychologists, physicians, and others, as necessary, to ensure that everyone involved in the hiring process has the information necessary to conduct their respective assessments of the candidate.

Areas of Investigation

Commission Regulations 1953(e) and 1959(e)

The required areas of investigation for peace officer candidates remain unchanged; however, the many areas of investigation for public safety dispatchers have been changed from “recommended” to “required.” As a result, the areas of investigation for these two job classifications are now quite similar. In addition, the July 2009 standards provide detailed specifics on the documentation necessary for each area of investigation for both peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates.

The required areas of investigation are summarized below. More detailed information is provided in Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statement.”

- Citizenship Verification (Peace Officers) – Peace officers must be citizens or have applied for citizenship within three years of appointment. (California Highway Patrol officers must be citizens at time of appointment.) Accepted proof includes government-issued birth certificate or naturalization documentation, but it does not include a U.S.-issued passport.
- Age (Peace Officers) – Peace officers must be at least 18 years old.
- Employment Eligibility (Public Safety Dispatchers) – There are no specific citizenship or age requirements for public safety dispatchers; however, proof of eligibility to work in the United States is now required.
- Criminal Record Checks – Local, State, and National (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Criminal record searches at the local, state, and national levels continue to be required. Fingerprint clearances continue to be required from the DOJ and FBI. Firearms clearances continue to be required for peace officer candidates.
- Driving Record Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – DMV reports or other official driving records continue to be required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers.
- Education Verification (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Minimum peace officer educational requirements are detailed in GC §1031\(e\), which was revised in January 1, 2009 to expand the list of acceptable educational institutions. Although there are no minimum educational requirements for public safety dispatchers, verification of educational history must now be collected as a measure of conscientiousness, learning ability, and related attributes. Transcripts are acceptable proof; diplomas are not.
- Employment History Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Employment checks continue to be required for a period of at least 10 years for peace officers; employment checks over a ten year period are now required for public safety dispatchers.

- Relatives/Personal References Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Contacts and interviews with relatives, including former spouses and personal references listed on the candidate’s Personal History Statement continue to be required for peace officers, and are now required for public safety dispatchers.
- Dissolution of Marriage Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Proof of marriage dissolution/separation is now explicitly stipulated in the requirements for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. Previously, proof was only required if the candidate subsequently remarried; it is now required for all candidates who have divorced or separated, regardless of their subsequent marital status.
- Neighborhood Checks (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Contacts and interviews with neighbors continue to be required for peace officers, and are now required for public safety dispatchers.
- Military History Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Proof of Selective Service registration (where applicable) and military service records continue to be required for peace officers, and are now required for public safety dispatchers.
- Credit Records Check (Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers) – Credit records checks continue to be required for peace officers, and are now required for public safety dispatchers.

Background Investigation Updates

Commission Regulations 1953(f) and 1959(f)

Background investigation updates are now explicitly sanctioned for peace officers and public safety dispatchers who are either reappointed to the same department, or who transfer (with no break in service) to a different department within the same city, county, state, or district that maintains a centralized personnel and background investigation support division. For reappointments, the background investigation must address the period of time since the individual separated from the department. For inter-departmental transfers, the period since the last background investigation must be covered. All update investigations, at a minimum, must include a new local criminal record check, state and national criminal record checks (unless the individual was not removed from the DOJ or FBI files), DMV check and credit check.

Documentation and Reporting

Commission Regulations 1953(g) and 1959(g)

The revised documentation and reporting requirements provide detailed specifications on information to be maintained in the background investigation file. It specifies that there must be sufficient information for the reviewing authority to make a conditional offer of employment, that supporting documents must be originals or true, current and accurate copies, and that these documents must be available during POST compliance inspections. Referencing related statutes and case law, this regulation also addresses retention requirements and access by others involved in the hiring process, and by those conducting background investigations on behalf of other law enforcement/public safety dispatcher agencies. More detailed information is provided in Chapter 4: “The Background Investigation Process.”

Disclosure Provisions: Differences and Similarities between Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

There are statutory provisions that allow investigators greater access to background information of peace officer candidates, and other statutes that allow special access to information from past and current employers of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers. These include:

- Deferred Entry of Judgment – Penal Code §1000.4\(a\) allows those who have successfully completed a deferred entry of judgment program to refrain from disclosing any arrest or criminal record associated with that offense. Public safety dispatcher candidates fall under this protection; however, PC §1000.4\(b\) specifically exempts peace officers (who must therefore disclose this information).
- Arrests and Detentions – Labor Code §432.7 prohibits employers from considering an arrest (or detention) that did not result in a conviction. However, a provision in this statute permits employers to consider arrests and detentions in the case of peace officer applicants as well as other applicants of criminal justice agencies (including dispatchers) as defined in the Penal Code.
- Compelled Disclosure of Employment Information – Government Code §1031.1 establishes procedures by which employers are legally obligated to furnish specified information in a peace officer pre-employment background investigation; this obligation does not extend to employers of public safety dispatcher candidates.

These disclosure differences should serve to caution investigators against making unnecessarily invasive inquiries, especially of dispatcher candidates. Other statutory protections may bar consideration of specified criminal processes for either peace officer or public safety dispatcher candidates (i.e., those records sealed pursuant to PC §851.7 or expunged pursuant to PC §851.8). Close consultation with the agency's legal counsel is critical.

The California courts have also shown a certain inconsistency when addressing a given candidate's rights to inspection of information contained in his/her pre-employment background investigation file. This is another area where close consultation with the agency's legal counsel is critical.

PRIVACY AND CONFIDENTIALITY LAWS

Article 1 of the California Constitution grants the citizens of the state the right of privacy. As a result, prospective employers are specifically prohibited from asking for unnecessarily intimate or personal information; they are also required to use the least invasive means necessary to gather any intrusive information that can be justified as necessary. Generally, the more intimate or personal the information, the more justified is the expectation that it will not be subject to public scrutiny.⁷

Despite privacy protections, courts have paid great deference to the need for intrusive questioning of law enforcement applicants - and peace officer applicants in particular – in light of the serious and often dangerous nature of the job and the inherent responsibility for carrying a firearm and protecting the public. However, this deference has been shown to have limits.

⁷ Walls v. City of Petersburg, 895 F2d 188, 192 (CA4 1990)

For example, in Thorne v. City of El Segundo,⁸ the court sided with a rejected peace officer applicant who was asked questions about her extra-marital affairs, abortions, and other “private, non-job-related considerations.”

In addition to limiting information to only that which is necessary, agencies must also establish procedures and precautions to prevent unwarranted disclosure of private and otherwise sensitive information. All information provided by the applicant in the Personal History Statement and throughout the background investigation is private and should be treated as confidential. No portion of the investigation should be revealed to persons other than those who are specifically authorized to receive and evaluate the results.

California law also protects the privacy rights of those who provide confidential information for investigative or employment purpose. These rights are described in detail in connection with contacting references in Chapter 5: “Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statements.”

Procedures that treat questionnaires in a confidential fashion are necessary to ensure that privacy interests of applicants and employees are maintained.⁹ All confidential information should be maintained in a secure filing cabinet, with access limited to those involved in the employment decision.

CONFIDENTIALITY VS. LEGAL PRIVILEGE

By California law, legally mandated background investigations enjoy “absolute privilege”¹⁰ (whether the investigator goes to the other party or the party voluntarily comes to the investigator). In a nutshell, communications protected by absolute privilege may not be introduced in a court proceeding adverse to the privilege-holder’s interests. It does not mean that someone cannot be sued over a privileged communication; it means that they are very unlikely to be successfully sued.

Absolute privilege should not be confused with confidentiality. In general, the only legally confidential aspect of communicated background information is the reference’s identity: case law, the California Information Practices Act¹¹ and even the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act¹² protects from disclosure the identity of persons contacted.

It is therefore unwise to promise confidentiality that does not exist in the law. What can be promised is that the background investigators’ sources of information are protected, as well as any information that could identify those sources, especially in light of some federal appellate court holdings regarding privileges and immunities in law enforcement background investigations.¹³

EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION LAWS AND REGULATIONS

There are ever-increasing numbers of laws and regulations – both federal and state - that govern the personnel practices of all employers, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act Title VII of the Civil Rights Act \(CRA\) of 1964 (as amended), the Age Discrimination in Employment Act \(ADEA\) of 1967, the Americans with Disabilities Act \(ADA\) of 1990, and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act \(FEHA\). They all share a common purpose: to prohibit unfair discrimination in employment and provide equal opportunity for all. Unfair discrimination occurs when employment decisions are based on any protected class, including race; gender;¹⁴ religion; ethnicity; national origin or ancestry; age; disability; political affiliation; (and in California), pregnancy, medical condition, marital status, and sexual orientation, rather than on job-relevant knowledge, skills, abilities, and other characteristics.

Unfair discrimination can take two forms: Disparate Treatment or Disparate Impact. Disparate treatment occurs when an applicant from a protected class is treated differently than other applicants during the hiring process. Employers are vulnerable to allegations of disparate treatment when their selection inquiries and practices are inconsistent and irrelevant to the applicant's ability to perform the job. In Weiner v. County of Oakland,¹⁵ for example, the court ruled that the questions asked specifically of a female applicant for a correctional officer position were inappropriate, such as whether she could work with aggressive young men, whether her husband approved of her working, and whether her family would be burdened if she needed to change her normal household chores as a result of the job. In another case, the female applicant for a position in the all-male Hampton Beach Meter Patrol was asked whether she had experience using a sledgehammer, and if she could participate in stake-outs and make unassisted arrests. Not surprisingly, the court could find no relationship between the questions asked and the job of writing citations and collecting money from parking meters.¹⁶

Background investigators should carefully evaluate the relevance of their inquiries, especially those that focus on or single out individuals based on their protected class status. For example, asking applicants questions such as “What is your religion?” “What church do you attend?” “What is your political affiliation?” “Are you a homosexual?” “What is your race?” “Are you pregnant?” “Do you plan to have children? If so, when?” invite charges of intentional, disparate treatment. Although there are certain statutory allowances for screening peace officer and other public safety applicants, questions in even these areas are ill advised unless they are sufficiently related to an essential job function.

Disparate impact occurs when a seemingly neutral standard or practice results in a substantially different rate of selection that works to the disadvantage of members of a protected class.¹⁷ For example, a height standard can disqualify a disproportionate percentage of women and certain minorities; standards related to credit history or arrest records tend to target certain minorities in disproportion to their percentage of the population. Any selection procedure that causes disparate impact may only be used if it can be demonstrated that it is job-related and consistent with business necessity (i.e., essential to the safe and efficient operation of the agency).

¹⁵ Weiner v. County of Oakland, 14 FEP 380 (1976).

¹⁶ King v. New Hampshire Department of Resources and Economic Development 1977 CA1 562 F2d 80

¹⁷ Disparate impact is normally indicated when the selection rate for one group is less than 80% (4/5) that of another.

Although these laws impose restrictions on the types of information that can be collected, the timing of investigations, and the manner in which decisions can be made and justified, it is important to remember that no federal or state statute, court decision, or binding public policy requires an employer to hire unqualified persons or to lower job relevant, legitimate employment standards. The most important way to ensure that the background investigation process is legally acceptable is to focus only on that which is necessary for determining if a candidate meets lawful position requirements and standards. Background investigators must therefore be fully familiar with and able to articulate all aspects of the job in question and the relationship to their inquiries. Agency policy should ensure consistency in the manner in which background information is collected and evaluated, yet allow flexibility to handling each applicant individually, as necessary.

DISABILITY DISCRIMINATION LAWS AND REGULATIONS

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

Confidentiality is never more important than when dealing with medical and disability-related information. In fact, the manner in which disability-related information is acquired, evaluated, and treated is the focus of the federal Americans with Disabilities Act \(ADA\) of 1990 and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act \(FEHA\). The purpose of both of these statutes is to prohibit discrimination against qualified individuals with disabilities in hiring and any other aspect of employment.

While a full explanation of these laws and their implications for employment procedures in general is far beyond the scope of this manual, a brief description of ADA/FEHA and how it may affect the conduct of background investigations is provided below. A list of recommended ADA/FEHA resource documents is provided at the back of this manual. In addition, background investigators are urged to consult with their legal counsel and/or ADA coordinator whenever disability-related issues arise.

The ADA and FEHA are NOT identical. Federal and state disability laws differ in terms of who is considered “disabled” (and therefore protected), what can be asked after a conditional job offer is extended, and in other ways. In general, the California FEHA affords more protection to the disabled than does the ADA, although recent amendments to the ADA have brought many of its provisions closer to those specified in California law. Where there are differences between the two laws, the one that provides the most protection to the disabled prevails, and it will be those provisions that are discussed below with respect to their impact on background investigations.

Who Is Protected

To be protected by ADA/FEHA, individuals must be: 1) disabled and 2) “otherwise qualified” to perform the essential functions of the job (with reasonable accommodation, if necessary). Individuals are “disabled” if they have a physical or mental impairment that limits one or more major life activities, a record of such impairment, or are regarded as having an impairment. Current illegal drug use (either use of illegal drugs or unlawful use of legal drugs) is not covered by these laws. However, individuals who have a history of drug addiction/dependence are. Both current and past alcoholism are protected conditions, as are individuals in California with gender identity disorders.

Who Is Not Protected

The following conditions are expressly not protected under ADA and FEHA:

- Pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, or other sexual behavior disorders
- Compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania
- Psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs

Normal-range characteristics and attributes are not limitations and therefore are also not included in the ADA/FEHA definition of “disability.” These include homosexuality; bisexuality; physical characteristics such as eye color, hair color, left-handedness, or height, weight, or muscle tone that are within normal range and are not the result of a physiological disorder; and common personality traits, such as poor judgment, a quick temper, or general stress due to job pressure.

No matter how disabled, applicants must also be otherwise qualified in order to be protected by these statutes. To be otherwise qualified, applicants must first meet all statutory and other minimum qualifications. Law enforcement agencies also are well within their rights to require applicants to have law-abiding histories.¹⁸

Individuals must also be able to do the job, with or without reasonable accommodation. They must be able to do the job without posing a direct threat, which is defined as a significant risk of substantial harm to themselves or especially to others (and the threat cannot be reduced by reasonable accommodation). The determination as to whether someone poses a direct threat must be based on medical facts of the situation, rather than merely fear or speculation.

Essential Job Functions

Doing the job is defined as being able to perform the essential functions. Essential functions are those duties that are considered fundamental (as opposed to marginal) to the position. Employers have the right and the responsibility for identifying the essential functions of the position to serve as the basis for determining applicants’ suitability for employment. It is therefore imperative that agencies create and maintain accurate job descriptions, and that background investigators become familiar with these descriptions so that there is a shared, explicit understanding of what it takes to be able to do the job.

In addition to agency job descriptions, POST has conducted analyses of both the peace officer and public safety dispatcher jobs. The resulting descriptions of the duties, tasks, and demands of these jobs are discussed in POST publications such as the Entry-Level Uniformed Patrol Officer Job Analysis: Task Analysis, the Patrol Officer Job Demands section of the Medical Screening Manual for California Law Enforcement, and the Public Safety Dispatcher Job Analysis.¹⁹

Based in part on these analyses, POST identified attributes and characteristics critical to the safe, effective job performance of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers, and amenable to assessment in the background investigation. The resulting POST background dimensions are fully described in Chapter 2, “Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions.”

¹⁸ Hartman v. City of Petaluma, 841 F. Supp. 946 (1994)

¹⁹ These and other POST documents can be downloaded from the POST website at <http://www.post.ca.gov/Publications.aspx>.

Reasonable Accommodation

A reasonable accommodation is defined as “any change or adjustment to a job or work environment that permits an otherwise qualified, disabled applicant to compete for and perform the essential functions of the job.” Reasonable accommodation can take many forms, ranging from allowing extra time on a written test, providing regular breaks to allow an employee to take medications, to allowing a student to use a light or smaller handgun.

Reasonable accommodation is one of the cornerstones of ADA/FEHA, but it is a legally complicated concept and one unlikely to emerge during most of the background investigation process. However, should an applicant request reasonable accommodation, a background investigator is well-advised to contact the agency’s ADA coordinator or other appropriate personnel. It is sufficient here to emphasize that: 1) providing reasonable accommodation is a statutory obligation of employers, unless the accommodation would cause an undue hardship to the operation; and 2) decisions surrounding the choice and implementation of any accommodation should be based on individualized assessment, resulting from a constructive discussion with the disabled individual and, when necessary, an appropriate healthcare professional.

THE CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT: PRE- AND POST-OFFER INQUIRIES

Another cornerstone of the ADA and FEHA is the separation of the pre-employment process into two stages, punctuated by a conditional offer of employment (COE). For the COE to be considered “bona fide” (i.e., real), employers must evaluate all relevant non-medical information that they reasonably can obtain and analyze prior to extending the offer.²⁰ An example of such a conditional offer is included in Appendix B. As reflected in this example, the COE itself should state that the applicant has provisionally passed the background investigation, and that additional background information may be investigated at the post-offer stage which could, if warranted, result in the withdrawal of the job offer.

The Pre-Conditional Offer Stage

Prior to extending the applicant a COE, no disability-related inquiries can be asked on forms or in interviews, nor can such information be sought from third parties (e.g., past employers, references). Disability-related questions include asking applicants if they have had a particular disability or suffered from a mental condition. Questions about a history of worker’s compensation claims or job-related injuries are also forbidden pre-offer, since these types of questions may elicit disability-related information. General questions that are likely to elicit disability-related information are also prohibited pre-offer, such as, “What impairments do you have?” “Have you ever been hospitalized?” or “What medications do you take?”

At the pre-offer stage, it is acceptable at any time to ask applicants about employment history, including questions about the circumstances of any gaps or sudden departures from employment. This is permitted even if the applicant was unemployed or terminated because of disability-related reasons. It is also permissible to ask pre-offer questions about previous attendance records (e.g., “How many days were you absent from your last job?”). Although it is not permissible to ask pre-offer questions about the number of days an applicant missed work in a previous job due to illness, it is legal to ask questions involving abuse of leave (e.g., “How many Mondays and Fridays were you absent last year other than approved time off?”).

A history of drug addiction or dependence is considered a disability; therefore, questions that could reasonably be expected to elicit this information are prohibited, such as “Have you ever been addicted to drugs?” or “Have you ever been treated for drug addiction?” Questions that address extent of past drug use are also prohibited, such as “How many times have you used illegal drugs in your life?” or, “How often did you use illegal drugs in the past?”

Current illegal use of drugs does not fall under the protection of the ADA/FEHA; however, there is no clear-cut definition of “current;” rather, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) merely states that “current” is to be considered “...recently enough to justify an employer’s reasonable belief that involvement with drugs is ongoing.”²¹ The POST Personal History Statement uses six months as a benchmark for questions on current illegal drug use; however, this time frame is intended as a rule of thumb rather than a legally sanctioned standard.

Individuals with a past history of recreational or casual drug use also fall outside the protection of the law. Therefore, narrowly-defined questions about past drug use that do not address frequency or extent of use are permissible pre-offer. The POST Personal History Statements include examples of such questions. Any additional pre-offer questions on this topic should not be considered without the input of legal counsel.

Unlike illegal drug use, current and past alcoholism are protected. Therefore, alcohol tests are prohibited prior to the COE. No pre-offer questions may be asked regarding the extent of the applicant’s use of alcohol or other aspects of alcoholism. For example, applicants may not be asked pre-offer how much they drink. However, questions about social use of alcohol are permissible, as are inquiries about their (job-relevant) behavior, even if that behavior was a result of drunkenness. For example, it is legal to ask about DUIs pre-COE, as well as whether they have been late to or absent from work because of alcohol (or drug) use.

The Post-Conditional Offer Stage

After a COE has been extended, medical and disability related inquiries and examinations are permissible. However, all such questions must be job-related and consistent with business necessity, and all applicants must be subjected to the same basic inquiries. Note that a job offer revoked at this stage may be assumed to be due to disability-related reasons; therefore, an employer may be required to show that the applicant is unqualified or poses a direct threat.

Medical and other disability-related information must be treated with extreme confidentiality. Screening physicians, psychologists, and even background investigators should only disclose such information to others involved in the hiring process (including each other) on a need-to-know basis.²² This information must be kept confidential and stored in a separate, secure medical file — not with the employee’s regular personnel file. Access by others should be strictly limited. The law allows access to this type of information by only a few selected individuals, including: 1) supervisors or managers, who may be informed about necessary restrictions on the work or duties of an employee and necessary accommodations; 2) first-aid and safety personnel, who may be informed if a disability will require emergency treatment; 3) government officials investigating compliance with ADA/FEHA; and 4) state workers' compensation fund employees or representatives of insurance companies.²³

BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION INQUIRIES: PRE- OR POST-OFFER?

The sequencing of most phases of the hiring process is clear-cut: Written tests and oral interviews must be conducted pre-offer, since they do not address medical or other disability issues. On the other hand, medical and psychological evaluations must be deferred until the post-offer phase.

Situating the background investigation is another matter. On one hand, the determination of good moral character would not appear on its surface to require inquiries into medical, psychological, or other disability-related areas. As such, the background investigation should be conducted prior to the COE.

In reality, however, the background investigation can and does include inquiries prohibited at the pre-offer phase. Prohibited topics include histories of legal and illegal substance abuse (both drugs and alcohol), behaviors resulting from problems with stress tolerance and other psychological stability concerns, and learning disabilities as they relate to educational and employment history, to name a few. Disability-related information may be divulged by the candidates themselves, as well as by the numerous references contacted during the investigation, including past and current employers, family members, friends, roommates, neighbors, etc. But, at the pre-offer stage, background investigators are legally barred from pursuing this line of questioning, regardless of job-relevance or business necessity.

The regulations associated with both the ADA and FEHA include a provision allowing for the deferral of certain non-medical or non-psychological inquiries until the post-offer stage if it can be demonstrated that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE. POST submitted a written request to the EEOC for guidance on the proper interpretation of this provision with respect to the sequencing of peace officer background investigations. Specifically, POST asked about the permissibility under the ADA of deferring to the post-offer phase those parts of the peace officer background investigation that do not involve medical or other disability-related inquiries.

In their response, the EEOC stipulated that, at a minimum, official documents such as DMV records, birth certificates, and credit reports must be requested at the pre-offer stage, since the information in these documents do not touch on medical or other prohibited topics and they are readily obtainable. However, the EEOC agreed with POST that other aspects of the peace officer background investigation could lawfully be deferred until the post-offer phase, including (1) the receipt and evaluation of official documents that cannot be obtained in a timely manner, and (2) contacts and interviews with references, if this information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE. The exchange between POST and the EEOC is available at http://www.post.ca.gov/Data/Sites/1/post_docs/bulletin/2008-22.pdf.

²³ Note that access to this information does not include candidates themselves.

To ensure that the guidance offered by the EEOC was lawful with respect to the conduct of peace officer background investigations under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, POST initiated a legislative change that resulted in the January, 2009 addition of Government Code §1031.2:

“Consistent with the [ADA] and [FEHA], the collection of non-medical or non-psychological information of peace officers, in accordance with a thorough background investigation, as required by subdivision (d) of §1031, may be deferred until after a conditional offer of employment is issued if the employer can demonstrate that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the offer.”

Although there is no equivalent statute specific to public safety dispatchers, given the consistency between POST requirements for the conduct of peace officer and public safety dispatcher background investigations, it might seem that similar sequencing procedures would apply. However, since GC §1031.2 only refers to peace officer background investigations, any deferral of the non-medical portions of the public safety dispatcher background investigation should only be considered with the direct involvement and consent of legal counsel. In fact, legal counsel’s involvement is imperative before implementing any changes in the sequencing of either the public safety dispatcher or peace officer hiring process.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Why can’t the entire background investigation simply be deferred until after a COE has been extended?

A: For the COE to be considered “bona fide” (i.e., real), employers must evaluate all relevant nonmedical information that they reasonably can obtain and analyze prior to extending the offer.²⁴

Q: What if the applicant or other individual volunteers disability-related information at the pre-offer stage?

A: The background investigator may discover protected information pre-offer, either because an applicant or others volunteer disability-related information, or in the course of record reviews. If disability-related information is discovered pre-offer, background investigators may document the information and follow-up and/or disclose it to the appropriate person after a COE is extended. It is unlawful to use that information as a reason for not hiring the person unless the employer can provide a legal defense.

Q: How long must an agency wait for documents to be received before being able to extend a conditional offer of employment and continue with the background investigation?

A: There’s no exact answer to this question, but in their letter to POST, the EEOC stated, “An unreasonable delay may exist where a responding agency routinely takes several weeks or months to provide documents and waiting for these official documents will significantly increase the length of the entire hiring process.” Therefore, it would be lawful to extend a conditional offer of employment if documents such as a DD-214, official transcripts, or returns from DOJ or FBI fingerprint checks take in excess of a few weeks to receive.

Q: What are the advantages of conducting parts of the background investigation post-offer rather than pre-offer?

A: First and foremost, when interviewing people post-offer, the background investigator is free to ask any questions – or follow-up on any volunteered information – as necessary, even if the topics turn to medical, psychological, or other disability-related issues (as long as the questions are job-related and consistent with business necessity). On the other hand, if the interview is being conducted pre-offer, the background investigator cannot continue or pursue this line of questioning. While this questioning can be resumed when/if the candidate reaches the post-offer stage, splitting the background investigation in this way can prove to be burdensome and inefficient.

For example, during the background interview, a candidate could reveal that he has a medical condition and could ask the investigator about his chances of passing the medical examination. If the interview is being conducted pre-offer, the investigator must defer any further discussion about the topic until the post-offer stage, no matter how relevant to the candidate's suitability for the job.

However, if this same conversation occurred at the post-offer stage, the investigator could pursue this line of questioning. Furthermore, the investigator could decide to answer the candidate's question by contacting the doctor directly, or even arranging for the candidate's medical evaluation ahead of schedule – and before the continuation of the background investigation.

Q: Are there any risks or disadvantages of conducting parts of the background investigation post-offer?

A: Deferring too much of the background investigation to the post-offer stage, especially public safety dispatcher background investigations, could trigger allegations of violation of the ADA and FEHA.

In addition, since medical and other related topics cannot be addressed until after a conditional offer is extended, it would be difficult for a candidate to argue that s/he was discriminated against on the basis of his/her disability if the background investigation was conducted pre-offer. If the candidate is disqualified on the basis of a background investigation that was conducted post-offer, the agency should be prepared to defend the decision against assertions of disability discrimination.

Q: Must part of the background investigation now be conducted post-offer?

A: No, the new law is permissive; agencies are free to revise or retain their current background investigation process. As this is an emerging area of law, it is imperative that agencies consult with their legal counsel before revising their background investigation process.

Q: Does GC §1031.2 permit the medical and psychological evaluation to be conducted pre-offer?

A: No. The medical and psychological evaluations conducted in compliance with GC §1031\(f\) and POST regulations must be conducted post-offer.

Regulation 1954: Peace Officer Medical Evaluation (a) Government Code Mandate/Evaluator Requirements Every peace officer candidate shall be evaluated by a licensed physician and surgeon (hereinafter referred to as “physician”) to determine if the candidate is free from any physical (i.e., medical) condition that might adversely affect the ability to exercise peace officer powers [GC §1031(f)]. The physician shall conduct the evaluation on behalf of and for the benefit of the employing department. (b) Timing of the Medical Evaluation The medical evaluation shall commence only after the department has extended a conditional offer of employment to the peace officer candidate [Americans with Disabilities Act (42 USC §12101 et seq); California Fair Employment and Housing Act (GC §12940 et seq)]. The medical evaluation must be completed within one year prior to date of employment. A new medical evaluation shall be conducted on peace officer candidates reappointed to the same department, unless the prior evaluation occurred within one year of the date of reappointment. (c) Medical Screening Procedures and Evaluation Criteria The medical screening procedures and evaluation criteria used in the conduct of the medical evaluation shall be based on the peace officer duties, powers, demands, and working conditions as defined by the department. This information shall be provided to the physician, along with any other information (e.g., risk management considerations) that will allow the physician to make a medical suitability determination. The POST Medical Screening Manual for California Law Enforcement provides medical examination and evaluation protocols that are based on patrol officer job demands and working conditions. These protocols may be adopted or adapted for use by the department, if and as appropriate. However, the use of the manual is discretionary. (d) Required Sources of Information for the Medical Evaluation The medical evaluation shall include a review by the screening physician of the following sources of information prior to making a determination about the candidate’s medical suitability. (1) Job Information. Job information shall consist of the peace officer duties, powers, demands, and working conditions provided by the department per Regulation 1954(c). (2) Medical History Statement. Prior to the medical evaluation, every peace officer candidate shall complete, sign and date a medical history statement.	The physician must be provided with a medically-relevant description of the hiring department’s peace officer position. The department is responsible for establishing medical screening standards. The examination and evaluation protocols contained in the POST Medical Screening Manual is intended to assist agencies in that regard, but its use is discretionary. The job information provided by the department must be reviewed by the physician before conducting evaluations. POST 2-252 can be downloaded at http://lib.post.ca.gov/Publications/2-252MedicalHistoryStatement.doc

SUMMARY OF POST PEACE OFFICER SELECTION STANDARDS:
REGULATIONS 1950–1955
Replacing Commission Regulation 1002, Procedures C-1 and C-2

1950: General Requirements

- All selection requirements must be satisfied prior to appointment.
- The same requirements apply to all officers, regardless of rank, including reading and writing assessment for reserve officers.
- The department has sole responsibility for determining what if any assessments are necessary for officers who:
 - change peace officer classifications, including from reserve to regular officer.
 - are inherited from another agency within the same city, county, state, or district, as a result of a merger.
- Reinstated officers are exempt from POST selection requirements; however, the department must submit a Notice of Appointment/Termination to POST, submit fingerprints to DOJ and FBI, obtain evidence of citizenship if appropriate, and perform DMV check.
- Publicly elected peace officers are exempt from POST selection requirements.
- Local agencies have the right to implement more rigorous requirements, additional standards, and assessments as they see fit.

1951: Reading and Writing Ability

- Reading and writing test scores are transportable across agencies and have no shelf life.
- The POST Entry-Level Law Enforcement Test Battery or other professionally developed and validated test of reading and writing ability can satisfy this requirement.
- The agency establishes own cut score or other acceptable demonstration of reading and writing ability.
- Reading and writing ability assessment required for reserve officers.
- Agencies using POST Law Enforcement Test Battery must have security agreement on file.

1952: Oral Interview

- Use of POST Interview Manual is discretionary; however, the POST interview factors must be assessed.
- The interview must take place pre-offer.

1953: Background Investigation

- Use of POST background investigation manual is discretionary; however, the POST background dimensions must be assessed.
- Per GC §1031.2 nonmedical or non-psychological background information may be collected after a COE, including
 - official documents that cannot be obtained and evaluated in a timely manner during the pre-offer period, and
 - information derived from contacts and interviews with references.
- Background investigators, screening physicians, and psychologists must work together, as necessary, for each evaluator to make their respective assessments of the candidate's suitability.

SUMMARY OF POST PEACE OFFICER SELECTION STANDARDS:

- Specific, detailed documentation criteria (including shelf life) provided for each area of investigation.
- Contact with individual school references is no longer required.
- The revision to GC §1031\(e\) broadens the criteria for satisfying the educational requirement.
- Investigation of marriage dissolution/separation is expanded to include those individuals who have not remarried.
- Allows abbreviated background updates (consisting of only areas where information might have changed) for officers who:
 - are reappointed to the same agency, or
 - transfer to a different agency within the same city, county, state, or district.
- Background report must be sufficient to support a hiring decision.
- Background reports must be retained throughout the officer’s tenure at that agency, and in compliance with other record retention statutes.
- Requires access to background reports by POST and other law enforcement agencies who are conducting background investigations of the candidate

1954: Medical Evaluation

- Physicians conduct evaluations on behalf of the hiring agency (vs. the candidate).
- Local agencies are responsible for developing medical screening procedures and criteria based on their peace officers’ powers, duties, demands, and working conditions.
- Use of the POST Medical Screening Manual is discretionary.
- Agencies must communicate the powers, duties, demands, and working conditions to the physician.
- Results of medical examination are valid for one year.
- Physicians must request information from treating physicians or other relevant health professionals, if warranted and obtainable.
- The determination of the candidate’s medical suitability must be made by the physician.
- The physician may report additional information beyond the suitability determination as necessary and appropriate.
- Second-opinion rights of medically-rejected candidates per CCR 7294. POST requirement that agencies provide relevant job information to candidates’ second opinion evaluators, upon request. Ultimate manner of resolving differences rests with the hiring agency.

1955: Psychological Evaluation

- The purpose of the psychological examination is revised from “detecting job-relevant psychopathology” to determining whether the candidate is “psychologically capable of exercising the powers of a peace officer and withstanding the psychological demands of the position.”
- Screening psychologists must meet statutory education and experience requirements, and be familiar with relevant research literature and state and federal law.

- Psychologists conduct evaluations on behalf of the hiring agency (vs. the candidate).
 - Local agencies are responsible for developing psychological screening procedures and criteria based on the peace officer powers, duties, demands, and working conditions.
 - Agencies must communicate the powers, duties, demands, and working conditions to the psychologists.
 - Candidates must be assessed against the POST Peace Officer Psychological Screening Dimensions.
 - Results of psychological examination are valid for one year.
 - Psychologist must review relevant work, life and developmental history, based on the background investigation report and/or a separate personal history questionnaire.
 - Psychological interview must cover issues arising from review of written assessments, background issues, treatment records (if available), and other relevant information.
 - Psychologists must request information from treating health professionals, if warranted and obtainable.
 - Information from all sources must be considered in the determination of psychological suitability.
 - The determination of the candidate's psychological suitability must be made by the psychologist.
 - The psychologist may report additional information beyond the suitability determination as necessary and appropriate.
 - Second-opinion rights of psychologically-rejected candidates per CCR 7294. POST requirement that agencies provide relevant job information to candidates' second opinion evaluators, upon request. Ultimate manner of resolving differences rests with the hiring agency

SUMMARY OF POST PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER SELECTION STANDARDS:
REGULATIONS 1956–1960

Replacing Commission Regulation 1018(c), Procedure C-1

1956: General Requirements

- The changes in the general requirements for dispatcher selection mirror those for peace officers (see changes for 1950).

1956(c): Exceptions

- Reinstated dispatchers are exempt from POST selection requirements; however the department must submit a Notice of Appointment/Termination to POST, and fingerprints to DOJ and FBI.

1957: Verbal, Reasoning, Memory, and Perceptual Abilities

- Verbal, reasoning, memory and perceptual ability test scores are transportable across agencies and have no shelf life.
- The agency establishes own cut score or other acceptable demonstration of verbal, reasoning, memory, and perceptual ability.

1959: Background Investigation

The changes to the dispatcher background investigation standards are primarily intended to align these standards with those of peace officers (Regulation 1953), consistent with the current standard of practice. Previous public safety dispatcher areas of investigation that were previously only recommended are now required, including:

- Employment Eligibility: Citizenship or permanent resident alien (as required of all U.S. employees)
- Education Verification: No minimum requirement (can be used to verify the accuracy of what is reported on the PHS and as a measure of several POST background dimensions – e.g., learning ability)
- Employment History Checks: Self-explanatory
- Relatives/Personal References Checks: Self-explanatory
- Dissolution of Marriage Check: For the same reasons as peace officer requirement
- Military History: For the same reasons as peace officer requirement
- Credit Records Check: As important for dispatchers as peace officers, since they have access to CLETS

1960: Medical Evaluation

- The evaluation must be conducted by a licensed physician or a licensed health care professional under supervision of a licensed physician.
- The evaluation must be conducted on behalf of the department.
- Local agencies are responsible for developing medical screening procedures and criteria based on their dispatchers' duties, demands, and working conditions.
- Agencies must communicate the duties, demands, and working conditions to the physician.

THE BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION PROCESS

PRIOR TO INITIATING THE INVESTIGATION

Before beginning the investigation, the investigator should be fully familiar with the laws and regulations associated with the conduct of backgrounds. Investigators are strongly advised to complete POST-certified background investigation courses as described in Chapter 1.

Investigators also need to understand local policies and ordinances, agency standards, and their agency's needs and philosophy regarding the background investigation process. They need the ground rules regarding the resources (both human and other) committed to this process, and a full understanding of what is expected of background investigators.

Agency procedures, resources, and priorities will have a significant impact on the manner in which background investigations can be conducted, including:

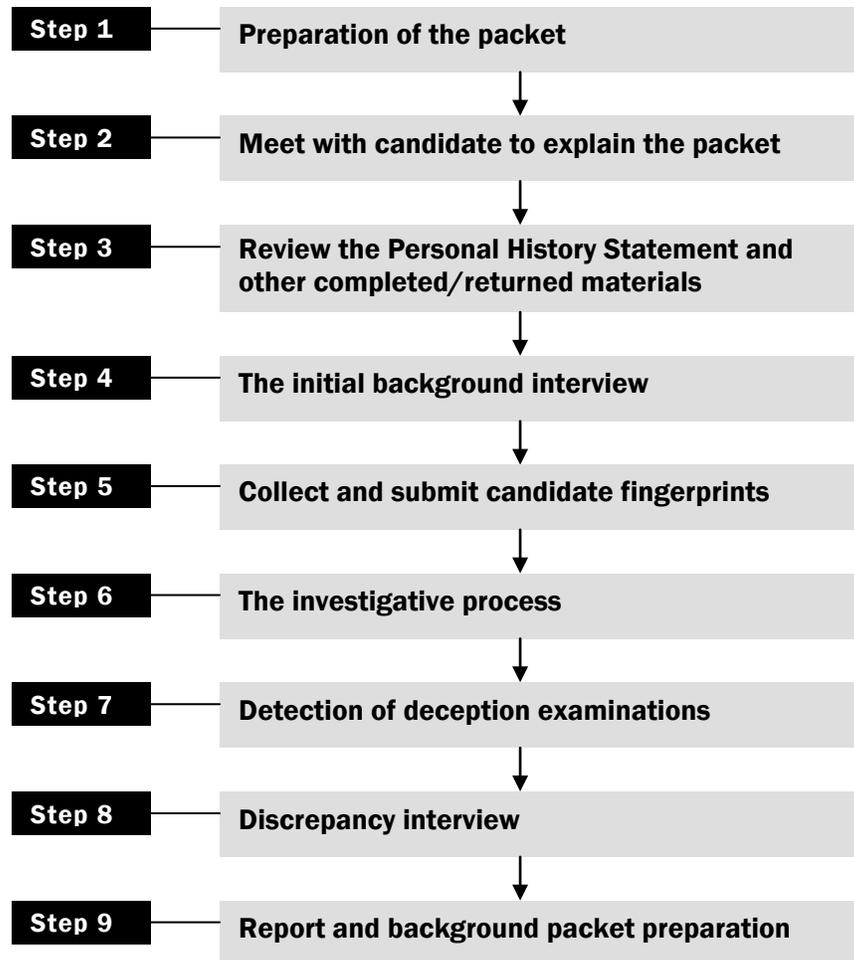

- 1) The amount of time available to complete the investigation,
- 2) The resources available for conducting background investigations,
- 3) Whether background investigations are a full-time assignment or an ancillary duty,
- 4) The extent to which the agency has clearly defined background and hiring policies,
- 5) Availability of clerical support,
- 6) The agency's policy regarding interactions between the background investigator and others involved in the hiring process (i.e., the truth detection examiner, psychologist, or medical doctor), and
- 7) The background investigator's role in the hiring decision.

Investigators must also balance agency resources against the value of the background information to be gained. Geography, logistics, staffing, funding, and urgency all have an impact on available resources. The fewer resources available, the more important it is to choose wisely when investing time and effort in a specific situation. Careful planning is critical; investigators must learn to maximize the available time and personnel resources. For example, driving halfway across the state to speak with a manager at the local fast food restaurant where a candidate worked eight or nine years ago may not be a very productive use of time.

THE BACKGROUND STEPS

The background investigation phases or “steps” are graphically represented in Figure 4.1 below. These steps pertain to the investigations of both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; however, the scope, depth, and necessity of a particular step may vary between these two classifications.

Agencies have considerable latitude in how these steps are ordered and implemented, and even whether certain steps (e.g., discrepancy interviews) are performed at all. However, federal and state laws do restrict when certain phases of the hiring process can or must be conducted. As discussed in the previous chapter, medical and psychological examinations must be conducted post-offer. The sequencing of the background investigation with respect to the conditional offer of employment was discussed in the previous chapter, and will be revisited later in this chapter.

Step 1 Preparation of the Packet

The precise composition of a background packet will vary from agency to agency, based on department policies, guidance from the agency's legal counsel, and consultation with the agency's human resources or personnel department. At a minimum, the packet should include:

- Agency-specific information - hiring requirements and policies, detailed instructions, etc.
- A personal history statement²⁵ (e.g., POST Forms 2-251/2-255 or local agency alternative) that the candidate must complete and return
- A list of documents (birth certificates, high school transcripts, etc.) that the candidate is expected to furnish (and how and when they are to be furnished)
- Multiple waivers and authorization forms, such as:
 - advisements regarding false statements (sample B.2 in Appendix B),
 - lateral advisements (samples B.3 and B.4 in Appendix B), and
 - authorization forms for release of information (samples provided in Chapter 5, subsection PHS Section 5: Experience and Employment).

Actual agency advisements and forms should be on current department letterhead, reviewed by legal counsel, and notarized as necessary.

- Credit Advisement Form to comply with the Fair Credit Reporting Act ([15 USC §1681) and the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civil Code §1785.20 and §1785.20.5).
- If a contract investigator is to be used, appropriate Investigative Consumers Reporting Agencies Act (ICRA) forms should be included. (Note: This is a legally complex subject. Investigators should never attempt to devise the forms for this specific use without very careful guidance from their agency's legal counsel.)²⁶
- Additional forms (e.g., blank supplementary questionnaires, child abuse and adult abuse reporting statements, drug policies, etc.).

Labor Code §432 specifies that applicants are entitled to copies of all application documents that they are required to sign.

Investigators are unlikely to be charged with the responsibility for developing a background packet. Departmental forms, including blank waivers, are important documents which require the review and concurrence of the chain of command and the agency's legal counsel. Even the format/layout of official correspondence is commonly specified by the department head. However, investigators must bear responsibility for ensuring that departmental information is current and contains up-to-date contact information.

It is useful to maintain complete background packets for potential candidates. More efficient still, these packets can be placed on-line or on a CD-ROM. There are many advantages to electronic packets. First, needed changes can be effected quickly and the warehousing of blank packets is minimized. (Note that the POST PHS forms are on-line.) Copies of these forms for candidates can easily be reproduced from this packet. Second, maintaining electronic packets allows the investigator to personalize each packet. By simply “searching and replacing,” proper dates, gender, names, and other needed identifying data can be inserted. Third, keeping an electronic master packet minimizes the likelihood that a needed form will be overlooked or misplaced from a hard-copy file. Fourth, if changes occur in the law, it is simple to update the file, rather than engage in the tedious process of replacing outdated items in an already-printed inventory.

²⁶ Financial Credit Reporting is discussed in "PHS Section 7: Financial" of Chapter 5.

Step 2

Meet with Candidate to Explain the Packet

It is a good idea to meet with the candidate to present the background packet personally. By explaining each item in the packet, communication between the candidate and the investigator is fostered and confusion can be avoided. Investigators who question the need for this step do well to remember their own surprise when, as a candidate, they were first handed a background packet. Candidates for employment as a peace officer or public safety dispatcher may never have been confronted with such a comprehensive application document.

At this initial meeting, agency-specific requirements or policies can be discussed and each section of the Personal History Statement can be reviewed, emphasizing the need to be honest, thorough, and complete. The list of required documents should be reviewed as well. An agreed-upon time can be established for the candidate to return the completed documents. The investigator and candidate should exchange contact information, including cell phone numbers and e-mail addresses.

Note that, although LC §450 prohibits employers from charging applicants for submitting job applications and related expenses (e.g., taking employment examinations), this statute may not pertain to costs borne by candidates for obtaining their own personal, official documents (e.g., transcripts, birth certificate). Therefore, it may be permissible to require candidates to pay and be responsible for acquiring these documents.

Step 3

Review the Personal History Statement and Other Completed/Returned Materials

Once the candidate has completed a background packet, the investigator should review the submitted materials. The completed Personal History Statement should be reviewed to establish that there are no immediately disqualifying factors (e.g., felony conviction for peace officer candidates, lack of position-appropriate citizenship, admitted current illegal drug use, etc.). Notes should be made of responses and issues that require attention in the earliest steps of the investigation, including during an initial background interview.

It is permissible to make copies of passports, Certificates of Naturalization, and other official documents to include in the background investigation file (Note: Only copies made with the intent to defraud are prohibited by law). Copies should include a notation that the original or certified copy was inspected, the date of inspection, and the signature of the investigator.

DOCUMENT ANALYSIS

A typical background investigation may include 50 or more pages of documents, ranging from the Personal History Statement to copies of various releases to vital statistics documents, transcripts, credit reports, criminal histories, etc. The verification of all these documents can be challenging at best.

The analysis of original documents is far preferable to facsimile reproductions. The candidate should be required to bring original documents (or, in some cases, certified copies) to the investigator. If necessary, duplicates can be made and the originals returned to the individual. If copies are made, the investigator should make a note that the originals were reviewed.

In general, there are three issues that must be addressed when analyzing a document:

- 1) Is it authentic? Does it look real?
- 2) Is the information consistent with other claims made by the candidate, and the information already submitted or uncovered in the background?
- 3) Is it sufficient, that is, does it provide legally acceptable proof?

If in doubt about a given document, the best advice is to check with the originating source. Virtually any official document can be verified by the agency or institution of issuance. However, this can be a very time-consuming process; therefore, there are a few checks that investigators can initially do themselves, for example:

- 1) the social security number provided can be matched against the number on the college transcripts, credit report, and fingerprints,
- 2) the information on the driver's license can be checked against the information on the official driving record, and
- 3) the Selective Service registration number can be matched against the number obtained on-line.

Most documents submitted by candidates are what they say they are. The most common types of deficiencies involve documents that, although genuine, are not legally sufficient. Examples include:

- Ceremonial birth certificates from hospitals that, although real, are not legal birth certificates.
- School transcripts, although genuine, from unaccredited educational institutions.
- Credit reports that are real, but over one year old.
- Automobile liability insurance cards that are real but expired, or that do not name the candidate as an insured.

Step 4 The Initial Background Interview

It is advisable to meet with the candidate to review the information. This interview may take place either during or after the review of the information by the investigator. This initial background interview allows the investigator to:

- affirm with the candidate that documents are true, correct, and up-to-date,
- explore reasons or explanations for curious, suspicious, or incomplete responses,
- correct truly inadvertent errors or oversights and,
- get an overall feel for the candidate.

If corrections are necessary, they can be made in one of several ways: 1) on a separate working copy, thereby preserving the original; 2) on the original document, but only in a different color of ink, or 3) by having the candidate submit supplementary sheets explaining each correction. Available time and investigator's/department's preference dictate which of these options is best.

Agency policy will dictate the treatment and disposition of inaccurate or incomplete information. Some agencies have a zero tolerance for such error, insisting upon a correct and complete document the first time; others are more lenient.

Candidate responses that are vague, suspicious, or incomplete should be the focus of further questioning. This process will provide valuable insight into where the likely problems are to be found, thus allowing the investigator to begin prioritizing the focal points of the investigation.

It is recommended that this interview and all others be tape-recorded. Tape recordings can be a valuable back-up to the investigator's memory, especially in the event that a single investigator is handling multiple backgrounds. It also provides solid proof of what was asked and the content and manner of the answers. Candidates must be informed that interviews are being recorded.²⁷

The initial background interview is also an ideal time to have candidates execute all the necessary release and authorization forms. California law mandates that candidates be offered a copy of any document that they are required to sign.²⁸ A signed, notarized, comprehensive, and valid authorization for the release of information can offset the reluctance of contacts and references to answer questions about others. Sample releases are provided in Chapter 5, "Areas of Investigation and the POST Personal History Statements" and the Appendices; however, it is critical that the agency's legal counsel play an active role in the design, approval, and/or use of these forms. Unless otherwise specified, authorizations for release of information may only be valid for 30 days.²⁹

There may be circumstances where time or distance simply will not permit a face-to-face meeting between the investigator and the candidate. In this case, a telephone follow-up with the candidate may be the only means available.

²⁷ PC §632, et seq

²⁸ LC §432

²⁹ CC §1798.24\(b\). Note that the Information Practices Act only applies to state agencies; however, courts have applied provisions of this act to non-state agencies as well.

INTERVIEWING

A very substantial part of the background investigation process consists of making contact with a wide variety of individuals, including the candidates and their relatives, references, acquaintances, teachers, neighbors, employers, military acquaintances and others. All these individuals need to be interviewed, whether in writing, by telephone interview, or as a result of a face-to-face meeting.

The background process can be intimidating and intrusive to these interviewees, especially to the many candidates who have never experienced this depth of interrogation. Although candidates must cooperate fully and openly with a lawful background investigation, investigators are wise to remember that the best candidates are likely to have many choices — law enforcement and otherwise. The interview should be seen as an opportunity to represent the agency favorably in addition to uncovering job-relevant information.

With certain narrow exceptions, others who are contacted during the process are under no obligation to cooperate; investigators must rely upon their good will to gather the needed information. Unlike a criminal investigation, many people contacted in the course of a background have no idea that they were going to be interviewed, nor do they have expectations regarding the nature of the investigation. Many will be reluctant to answer questions about others. The investigator's skill in gaining the cooperation of others is critical. The style and manner in which these individuals are approached and interviewed will very often make the difference between success and failure.

There are many useful publications and resources dealing with the subject of interviewing, as well as a POST-certified course on Interviewing and Interrogation. It is beyond the scope of this manual to provide an in-depth discussion of effective interviewing. Presented below is a brief overview of some of the more important aspects of interviews that have the most direct bearing on the conduct of background investigation. Much of the information presented here was adapted from POST's "Interviewing Peace Officer Candidates: Hiring Interview Guidelines \(2003\)."

PREPLANNING

By taking the time to prepare and ask job-related questions and focus the interview on candidate qualifications, investigators maximize the use of the time spent in the interview and send a powerful message to interviewees that they are serious about evaluating candidates carefully and selecting the best person for the job. This positive message reflects well upon the agency, and can prove to be an effective recruitment device, as candidates appreciate employment practices that are thorough, job-related, and even-handed.

BEGINNING THE INTERVIEW

Establishing Rapport

Creating an accepting, open environment helps relieve the interviewees' anxiety, which in turn allows them to feel comfortable giving honest, candid answers. Therefore, building rapport can enhance the effectiveness of the interview by yielding more complete and accurate candidate information.

Open the interview session by greeting the individual with a sincere smile, lots of eye contact, and a firm handshake. Providing information about the background investigation can both serve as an icebreaker as well as ensure that interviewees understand the process and what is expected of them. Interviewees must be informed if an audio recording device is used. They should be encouraged to respond candidly and completely to all questions, to provide specific examples of past behavior, when appropriate, and to ask for clarification if a question is unclear.

POSING QUESTIONS

Open Versus Closed Questions

Questions can vary by the type of response required of the candidate, ranging from a simple “yes” or “no” (closed questions) to an in-depth answer. In general, answers to closed questions (e.g., “Have you ever worked the night shift?”) are often so short that they do not provide interviewers with sufficient, useful information. The result is that interviewers end up doing more talking in the interview than the candidate does. A “yes or no” question, for example, may require 15–20 words to ask, but only elicit a 1–3 word response. Therefore, questions that are open-ended are generally preferable.

Although they should be used sparingly, closed-ended questions do have their place in the background investigation. During the interview, they are useful for verifying facts, eliciting specific details, addressing questions arising from the candidate’s written responses, or for checking minimum qualifications.

Open questions require candidates to provide specifics, details, and other information. These questions are useful in finding how well the candidates organize their thoughts and sometimes they can reveal attitudes and feelings critical to effective job performance. They are generally more effective than closed-ended questions at developing insight into a candidate’s experience and abilities.

QUESTION PHRASING

Regardless of format, all questions must be worded clearly, simply, and concisely. The candidate must understand what is being asked without having to second-guess or read between the lines.

Interviewers can have a significant influence over the responses of candidates based on the specific wording chosen to communicate the question. Leading questions indicate to the candidate the response that the interviewer wants. Leading questions include those in which the correct answer is fairly obvious (e.g., “How important is it for a peace officer to have integrity?”) or implied by the way the question is phrased or delivered (e.g., “Would you be willing to use deadly force, if necessary?”)

FOLLOW-UP/PROBING

Follow-up questions can serve three important functions: clarification, elaboration, and verification.

1) Clarification – Follow-up questioning may be necessary if the interviewee’s response was vague or confusing, or indicates that he did not understand the question. Investigators should ask clarifying questions if they find themselves needing to make inferences or assumptions to fill in the gaps in the information provided. Sometimes clarifying questions may be as simple as repeating the initial question. Otherwise, clarifying follow-up questions typically begin with phrases such as “Could you explain again...,” “Help me understand,” or “What do you mean ...” It may also be appropriate to paraphrase what the individual said: “If I heard you correctly, here is what you said...”

2) Elaboration – An individual may provide a brief answer that needs to be expanded. In these situations, follow-up questions can be used to obtain more details. Sometimes a simple pause – saying nothing – will elicit a further response. Otherwise, probes such as “Tell me more about...,” “Walk me through...,” “Could you expand on...,” or “Please provide an example” can prompt additional, necessary information. Even if the response was complete, at times it may be useful to request another example or other additional information to ensure a complete picture of the individual.

3) Verification – In an effort to present themselves in the best possible light, candidates may provide impressive but not necessarily complete and accurate responses. Asking follow-up questions to obtain details about how, who, when, and where will help interviewers separate what is being said from how it is being said, to ensure that they are not unduly influenced by candidate presentation skills alone. Pressing candidates and others for specifics allows the investigator to retain control of the interview by ensuring that the answers provided are complete, accurate and in line with information the investigator sought.

INTERVIEWERS’ NONVERBAL BEHAVIOR

Nonverbal behavior (eye movements, changes in posture, facial expressions) can communicate as much information to the individual as the questions themselves. An investigator’s body language can either encourage or discourage information. There are several steps investigators can take to ensure that their nonverbal behavior creates an atmosphere in which the candidate will relax and talk more freely:

- Keep your eyes opened and focused on the individual, especially when asking questions or when a candidate seeks clarification.
- Maintain an open, interested posture: face the person, do not cross your arms; lean forward when listening to candidate responses.
- Keep a cheerful expression: smile, never frown, grimace or show confusion, disapproval, boredom, or impatience.
- Nodding your head indicates that you find the information useful and encourages the individual to continue, as does giving short verbal approval, such as “mm-hmm.”
- Speak at a reasonable, steady pace, using variation in voice loudness and tone to emphasize important points or requests and to keep communications sounding fresh and genuine.

DECEPTION IN THE INTERVIEW

Avoidance of eye contact, rapid blinking, and nervous body movements are commonly interpreted – particularly by experienced law enforcement officers – as signs of deception. However, research has demonstrated that nonverbal behaviors are unreliable indicators of lying. For example, while some individuals do look away while lying, others increase their degree of eye contact. Fidgeting and other nervous body movements can be natural behavior for some and a natural reaction to the stress of the interview for others. Therefore, investigators should avoid drawing conclusions about an individual’s deceptiveness or other motives based on nonverbal behavior alone.

Step 5 Collect and Submit Candidate Fingerprints³⁰

Agencies differ as to when fingerprints are obtained and submitted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the Department of Justice (DOJ). Although Livescan responses may return in 24 hours or less, problem records can take upwards of 30 days. Firearms clearance letters are mailed separately and may take several weeks to process.

For peace officer candidates, there will be three documents returned to the agency: 1) the criminal record return from the DOJ's Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, 2) the FBI criminal record return document, and 3) the DOJ firearms eligibility clearance return. The first two documents will also be returned for public safety dispatcher candidates. Each one of the documents must be reviewed carefully to ensure that there is a clearance on the return document, as error messages transmitted to the employer via email look very similar to actual Livescan reports. Therefore, investigators must carefully inspect these returns to avoid potential problems. Note that Livescan defaults to checking only California records for nonsworn candidates. Therefore, investigators must ensure that FBI fingerprints are specifically requested for public safety dispatcher candidates.

Any indication of criminal activity or a negative return must be thoroughly reviewed to determine compliance with POST and agency selection standards.

NOTE: Effective January 1, 2010, DOJ is required to provide the date and name of every agency that has previously requested a search of the candidate's pre-employment criminal history PC [§11105\(k\) and \(l\)].

Step 6 The Investigative Process

Each background investigation may take 40 or more working hours of an investigator's time. The investigative hours are likely to be spread out over many weeks, depending upon the candidate. Type of history, length of history, number of candidates, geographical history, available resources, and even competing demands on the investigator's time all have an impact on the length of time required.

Investigators should be aware of the available resources before embarking upon the investigation. Resource realities will dictate whether the investigation will focus on mailed inquiries, phone calls, face-to-face interviews, or some combination thereof.

Regardless of the manner in which references are contacted, the investigator must determine who and how many individuals to contact. The following general guidelines may help:

- Rather than using a "shotgun approach" (i.e., contacting everyone to ensure completeness), assess the expected value of the comments from a particular reference against the resources expended to get the information.
- Begin in the areas that appear to be the most time-consuming or an area which, if explored, is most likely to reveal information that will disqualify the candidate from further consideration. The areas will vary from candidate to candidate.

³⁰ Fingerprinting is also discussed in the Legal section of Chapter 5, Areas of Investigation, and the POST Personal History Statements.

- Contact a diverse group of persons who know the candidate across a variety of contexts (home, school, work, socially, the military). Often, the point of diminishing returns is reached when this type of diverse group echoes the same information about the candidate, both positive and negative. If significantly different information is revealed, or the contacts only know the candidate in a very limited context, more interviews are probably appropriate.

CYBER-INVESTIGATIONS: INTERNET SEARCHES AND SEARCH ENGINES

Internet searches may provide quick and convenient access to many public records not easily inspected in-person, provide background information on individuals who appear in the local media or other internet sources, and even assist in locating individuals and/or their employers when information furnished on a PHS is incomplete or out-of-date. However, the lure of cybersearching can easily result in countless valuable hours surfing for information of marginal use. An investigator must continuously balance the time available for the investigation against the potential value of information to be gained as a result of such searches.

It is also quite easy to spend excessive amount of time and resources searching on subscription search engines (e.g., Lexis-Nexis, Equifax, Autotrak, WestLaw). When using commercial search engines, it is wise to identify the focus of the search beforehand and narrow inquiries to information that will be of maximum value (and not otherwise reasonably available at a lower cost). This practice is advisable even when accessing free search engines (e.g., Google, Yahoo, MSN).

The proliferation of social networking sites (e.g., MySpace, Facebook, Twitter), may provide additional insights regarding candidates. Background investigators and others involved in the selection process may also find benefit in checking these sites and, where necessary, directing candidates to “unlock” their individual pages.

While the internet generally provides for the quick and inexpensive transmission of information, it is not secure. Background investigators are generally in possession of huge amounts of highly personal and sensitive data concerning their candidates, and care must be exercised before this information is transmitted over the internet.

Step 7

Detection of Deception Examinations

The administration of pre-employment “detection of deception” examinations (i.e., polygraph, voice stress analysis) is not a POST requirement; rather, their use is a matter of agency discretion.

Agencies electing to conduct a detection of deception examination should do so based on a full understanding of the advantages and limitations associated with this procedure. The placement of the examination within the pre-employment screening process should be decided in consideration of federal and state disability statutes. The ADA/FEHA statutes prohibit pre-offer inquiries involving medical or psychological disabilities, including history of drug use and current or past alcoholism. This prohibition applies even if the agency outsources this step in the process. Agencies should carefully review the provisions of California law and relevant case law with respect to the use and permissibility of such examinations.

Step 8 Discrepancy Interview

A discrepancy interview may be held if inconsistencies or other issues arise during the conduct of the investigation that impact a candidate's employment eligibility. It is recommended that the investigator prepare for the meeting by writing a description of each issue to be discussed. At the start of the interview, the candidate should be provided with a copy of the written description of each discrepancy, and given ample opportunity to provide a complete explanation for each identified issue. This interview is not the place to make any commitment to the candidate as to the outcome of the background investigation process.

It is highly recommended that all discrepancy interviews be audio or video recorded, with the knowledge of the candidate. As discussed previously, this prevents misinterpretation or misrepresentation of what was said.

Step 9 Report and Background Packet Preparation

The heart of the background investigation is the completed package. Excellent investigative work needs to be competently, clearly, and defensibly documented. The background report must clearly address all required areas of inquiry as they relate to the essential attributes as defined in the background dimensions.

Below are some general guidelines for writing effective reports:

- 1) Write for the reader! If the report cannot be understood, is too long, poorly written, or too confusing, it will not be read and nothing is gained.
- 2) Do not bury critically important information.
- 3) Assume that everything in the report might ultimately be subject to discovery. Avoid including information that cannot be supported with facts or corroboration.
- 4) Impressions count. While investigators should avoid injecting personal bias in any official action, their ability to assess the credibility and/or motives of others is key to a successful background.
- 5) If it cannot be documented, it did not happen. Do not put the agency in a position of having to defend something that is not documented.
- 6) Always keep in mind the visibility and importance of the background report and the investigation itself. The decisions resulting from this report will affect the quality of the agency's workforce. Their safety and effectiveness may well depend upon how well the investigation has been conducted and documented.

THE BACKGROUND PACKAGE

Commission Regulations 1953(g)(1) and 1959(g)(1) –Background Narrative Report – stipulate:

“The background investigator shall summarize the background investigation results in a narrative report that includes sufficient information for the reviewing authority to extend, as appropriate, a conditional offer of employment. The report, along with all supporting documentation obtained during the course of the background investigation, shall be included in the candidate's background investigation file. The supporting documents shall be originals or true, current and accurate copies as attested to by the background investigator. The background investigation file shall be made available during POST compliance inspections.”

The typical completed background package includes:

- Narrative summary
- Results of interviews
- Personal History Statements (PHS)
- Copies of relevant supporting documents
- Completed background report

These documents should be organized in a consistent, systematic manner. A package that is poorly organized or difficult to understand is unfair to the candidate as well as an inefficient use of the investigator's time and agency resources. POST offers sets of tabbed dividers for organizing peace officer and public safety dispatcher background reports. These background investigation report organizers may be ordered by contacting the POST Training Delivery and Compliance Bureau at 916 227-4863.

Use of these tabbed dividers is not mandatory, as POST does not dictate the precise format of a completed background package. What is important is that the background package be complete and organized so that all information can be readily located by the appointing authority and by POST consultants during the audit process. Chapter 6, "POST Compliance Inspections," includes detailed guidance on organizing the background investigation package in accordance with POST requirements.

Some agencies employ a system that includes a narrative that omits specific sources of information and sometimes specific details. This narrative, coupled with non-confidential material, might be shared with the candidate or others when required by law without compromising confidential and/or privileged information.³¹ Note, however, that information and documents collected in the course of the background investigation supporting the required areas of inquiry and investigation must be retained as discussed below under Record Retention.

The choice of a background organizational reporting system should be made in close consultation with agency command staff and the department's legal counsel.³² As noted earlier, any narrative and packaging system selected/developed must assure that all areas of inquiry and investigation are thoroughly documented in compliance with POST regulations.

An "investigator's checklist" is recommended, regardless of the reporting system chosen. The checklist should be included in the package,³³ along with all supporting documents situated in the appropriate sections of the completed background report packet (e.g., birth certificates, marriage dissolution documents, educational records, military records, credit report, fingerprint returns, motor vehicle records, and clearance letters from the psychologist and the medical evaluator).³⁴ Example checklists are provided in Tables 4.1 and 4.2.

A sample of a partial background report is included in Appendix C, illustrating the amount and depth of information that should be included. This sample report begins with a background

³¹ See Civil Code §1798.38, §1798.40, §1786.10, Penal Code §13302-§13303, etc. and Johnson v. Winter, 127 Cal.App. 3d 425

investigation checklist that documents the individuals contacted and the steps followed. A narrative summary, followed by an executive summary, are located behind POST report Tab A, Background Narrative Report.

Appendix C then includes the edited versions of interviews with contacts behind the appropriate tabs, including previous employers (Tab K), relatives and references (Tab L) and neighbors (Tab M). Note that there may well be additional documentation, such as returned questionnaires, included in these sections along with the edited narrative interviews.

Note: Previously completed background reports can serve as a useful training aid for new investigators; however, care must be taken to protect the privacy rights of the persons mentioned on these completed forms.

REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS

Agency policy will generally dictate whether the investigator is required to offer a recommendation. However, the hiring decision rests with the department head.

It is recommended that background investigators not include recommendations in their report unless their recommendations are always followed. This avoids placing the agency in the potentially embarrassing position of having to explain a hiring decision in the face of the investigator's contrary recommendation.

Rather than making such recommendations, investigators should summarize their findings — especially negative information — around the POST background dimensions.³⁵ Doing so can greatly aid the agency hiring authority's review and evaluation of the information contained in the larger report. An "executive summary," if used, is an excellent location for expressing the results of the investigation in terms of their impact on these critical attributes.

RECORD RETENTION

All parts of the narrative report need to be retained in the background package for inspection by POST in order to verify that all mandated areas of inquiry were thoroughly addressed. In addition, Commission Regulations 1953(g)(2) and 1959(g)(2) stipulate:

The background narrative report and supporting documentation shall be retained in the individual's background investigation file for as long as the individual remains in the department's employ. Additional record retention requirements are described in Government Code § 12946.

Government Code §12946³⁶ stipulates that all files containing records of application — including background information — must be retained for a minimum of two years after the files were initially created in the case of applicants who were not hired; records of terminated employees must be maintained for a minimum of two years from the date the employment action was taken. If notified that a verified complaint has been filed against it, an agency must preserve all records and files until the final resolution of the complaint.

Information gathered as a part of a background (as well as the overall hiring) process should never be destroyed without guidance from and the concurrence of agency command staff and,

³⁶ Retention requirements for counties are addressed in GC §26202; requirements for cities are covered in GC §34090

as appropriate, the agency's legal advisor. In addition to potential violations of POST regulation, the improper destruction of these records is a criminal offense in California.³⁷

Q: Must an investigator's handwritten notes be preserved along with the rest of the background?

A: If an investigator's notes are rough drafts of material faithfully and entirely reproduced in the background file, they do not have to be maintained. However, if the notes are the only record of information obtained, they would be subject to the same retention requirements as any other aspect of the background investigation.

THE CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

Traditionally, the completed background investigation package is forwarded to the hiring authority for evaluation. Those candidates found suitable are then notified by a conditional offer of employment (COE). However, closing out the background investigation prior to a COE limits lawful inquiries into areas such as history of illegal drug use, extent of alcohol use, or other disability-related issues that are prohibited at the pre-offer phase. Therefore, at a minimum, the COE should inform candidates that further background issues may continue to be investigated as warranted. A sample COE is provided in Appendix B.

By law, the entire background investigation may not be deferred to the post-offer phase. However, both ADA and FEHA regulations include provisions for allowing for the deferral of certain nonmedical or non-psychological inquiries until the post-offer stage "if the employer can demonstrate that the information could not have reasonably been collected prior to the COE."

A thorough discussion of the practical implications and options for the sequencing of the background investigation with respect to the COE is discussed in Chapter 3, "Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework" (see "The Conditional Offer of Employment: Pre- and Post-Offer Inquiries"). That section includes a discussion of GC 1031.2, a statutory provision that went into effect in January, 2009 that specifically addresses the pre/post offer sequencing of peace officer background investigations. As emphasized in Chapter 3, no changes in the sequencing of either the peace officer or the public safety dispatcher background investigation should be implemented without the direct involvement of the agency's legal counsel.

MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL EVALUATIONS AND BACKGROUND INVESTIGATIONS FOLLOW-UP

Medical evaluations are required for both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; associated POST regulations are contained in Regulation 1954 (peace officers) and 1960 (dispatchers). Only peace officer candidates are legally required to undergo a psychological examination (Regulation 1955).

Even if the background investigation is conducted pre-offer, background investigators may need to follow-up on personal history topics that could not be fully investigated at the pre-offer stage, such as extent or frequency of past illegal drug use, current/past alcohol abuse, and behavior issues or performance problems associated with medical or psychological conditions.

A request for any information or explanations that the applicant may have lawfully withheld at the pre-offer stage can be included with the conditional offer of employment itself.

During the course of the background investigation, the investigator may uncover information indicating that a candidate may be unfit for physical, emotional, or mental reasons. In such cases, the investigator should refer the information to the appropriate professional for evaluation. Furthermore, it is not uncommon for an examining physician or psychologist to seek information from the background investigator that might bear on a particular aspect of the candidate's medical or psychological condition. There may also be times when the physician or psychologist uncovers information unknown to but relevant for the background investigator. This information should be forwarded to the background investigator for evaluation and additional investigation if appropriate. In general, the psychologist, physician, and background investigator should work cooperatively as long as the information — especially that from the psychologist or physician to the background investigator — is provided on a strictly “need to know” basis see Regulations [1953\(d\)/1959\(d\)].

MEDICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL EXAMINATION DOCUMENTATION

Findings of the medical and psychological suitability evaluations must be reported in writing to the appointing authority for use in the hiring decision. As stipulated in Regulations 1954, 1955 and 1960, these documents must include:

- a) The evaluator’s contact information and medical license number,
- b) The candidate’s name,
- c) The date the evaluation was completed, and
- d) A statement, signed by the physician/evaluator, affirming that the candidate was evaluated in accordance with Commission Regulations. The statement shall include a determination of the candidate’s medical/psychological suitability for the position.

This document may also include information regarding the candidate’s need for reasonable accommodation, as necessary.

Documentation of medical/psychological clearance is intended to be kept in the individual’s background file; however, the actual report and other documents that include medical and/or psychological information must be kept separately and securely.

SECOND OPINIONS

California Regulation [2 CCR §7294.0\(d\)\(2\)] grants all candidates who are rejected based on the results of a medical or psychological evaluation the right to submit an independent expert opinion for consideration before a final determination of disqualification is made.³⁸ When a candidate notifies the department that s/he is seeking an independent opinion, the department is now required to make available the job duties, powers, demands, and working conditions, and the POST medical/psychological screening requirements (Commission Regulations 1954, 1955, and 1960). Other information may be shared with the second-opinion evaluator, such as specific procedures or findings from the initial evaluation, at the discretion of the department as appropriate.

³⁸ Code of Regulations, Title 2, §7294.0, subd. (d)(2) can be found by searching the California Office of Administrative Law’s online source for CCRs.

The means for resolving discrepancies in evaluations rests with the department, consistent with local personnel policies and/or rules. Regardless of whether it is created by the departmental physician or a second (or third) opinion evaluator, a Medical Evaluation Report, in compliance with POST medical/psychological documentation requirements, must be included in the background file of all candidates who are subsequently hired.

FINAL EVALUATION – FORMAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

At this time, the hiring authority should have a completed background report, including any required follow-up investigation. All documentation should be secured in the file, the narrative report of the background investigation completed, all medical and psychological screening requirements conducted, and any discrepancies resolved. The appointing authority is now ready to make a final hiring decision.

Once a formal offer of employment has been accepted, a Notice of Appointment (POST Form 2-114) must be submitted to POST within 30 days of appointment.

AREAS OF INVESTIGATION AND THE POST PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENTS

Commission Regulations 1953 and 1959 specify the required sources of information for background investigations of peace officers and public safety dispatchers, respectively. The required ten sources of investigation are:

- 1) Personal identifying information
- 2) Relatives and other references
- 3) Educational history
- 4) Residential history
- 5) Employment history
- 6) Military history
- 7) Financial history
- 8) Legal history
- 9) Driving history
- 10) Other topics related to assessing moral character

These information sources generally apply to both peace officers and public safety dispatchers; however, there are statutory and regulatory differences in the manner in which these areas can be investigated. These differences are highlighted in Table 5.1, which compares areas of investigations for these two occupations.

THE POST PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENT (PHS)

Per Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c), candidates must complete a personal history statement before the onset of the background investigation. Although the POST Personal History Statement will satisfy this requirement, it is not required. However, any form used to meet this requirement must include questions in the ten areas of inquiry listed above.

POST offers two Personal History Statements to assist in the conduct of background investigations:

- 1) Personal History Statement – Peace Officers (POST 2-251)
- 2) Personal History Statement – Public Safety Dispatchers (POST 2-255)

The PHS forms listed in Appendix D can be downloaded from the POST website (<http://post.ca.gov/forms.aspx>). They may be completed by hand or electronically (except for initials and signatures).

Although the two PHS forms contain many of the same questions, there are several key differences as a result of both statutes and the different demands and requirements associated with these two professions. These differences are listed in Table 5.2.

It is strongly recommended that, prior to using the POST PHS or any personal history statement; agencies submit the form(s) to their legal counsel for concurrence. Agencies who wish to revise the POST PHS prior to use at their agencies can request an unprotected version of these forms by emailing POST at: publications.manager@post.ca.gov.

The PHS is divided into ten sections that parallel the required areas of investigation. Each section/area of investigation is discussed below, referenced by the corresponding section in the POST Personal History Statements.

PHS Section 1: Personal

This section requests information on:

- Name (current, past, and nicknames)
- Address (residential and mailing)
- Contact Information (phone numbers and e-mail address)
- Citizenship Status/Eligibility for Employment
- Birth Place and Birth Date
- Social Security Number
- Driver's License
- Physical Description

This information is to be used to verify the candidate's identity, obtain contact information, determine that the candidate meets statutory requirements, and to enable fingerprinting and the accurate acquisition of documents required to successfully conduct the background investigation.

VERIFYING IDENTITY

Establishing identity is a first critical step in the background investigation process. An original birth certificate or certified copy should at least be examined, a copy of which can be made for the investigator's records. If a birth certificate cannot be located (or is in a foreign language), an original U.S. passport or an original or certified copy of a Certification of Naturalization, or presentation of a valid Permanent Resident Alien card will suffice. Candidates can be assigned the responsibility for obtaining these documents, as well as all other personal documents.

10. Other Topics	No difference	No difference

It is permissible to make copies of official documents; only duplicates made with the intent to defraud are prohibited by law.

Both the parents' and the candidate's name should be verified on these documents. Any discrepancies should be explained.

DISCREPANCIES IN NAMES – USE OF AN ALIAS

Name changes can occur for a variety of legitimate reasons, including marriage, adoption, or naturalization. The law permits individuals to use any name as long as the change of name is not for fraudulent purposes. However, the candidate should be able to produce documents that reflect these changes. Use of other names for fraudulent or other illegal purposes speaks directly to the individual's suitability for law enforcement.

CITIZENSHIP

Every employer in the United States is required by law to show that anyone hired since June 1, 1986 is legally eligible to be employed in the U.S.⁴⁰ This is true for native-born citizens, as well as naturalized citizens and resident aliens.

- Peace Officers – Peace officers must, at a minimum, be either United States citizens or permanent resident aliens who are eligible for and have applied for citizenship. (Note: Peace officers with the California Highway Patrol must be United States citizens.)⁴¹

All individuals born within the contiguous 50 states and the territories of Guam, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, and a portion of the Virgin Islands are citizens of the United States. Proper evidence of citizenship is a valid birth certificate documenting birth in the United States, or a valid document from the Department of State documenting birth to an American citizen in a foreign country, such as a child of parents in the United States military or in other foreign service. Such documents are issued by the State Department. Other evidence of citizenship is a Certificate of Naturalization. Since U.S. Passports can legitimately be issued to non-citizens such as U.S. Nationals and some others (who are not citizens), they do not provide adequate proof of citizenship.

Government Code §1031.5 stipulates that in order for resident aliens to achieve or maintain peace officer eligibility, citizenship status must be conferred within three years of application for citizenship. Resident aliens need to provide documentation that they are permanent resident aliens who are eligible and have applied for U.S. citizenship. Acceptable proof of citizenship includes both a Permanent Resident Alien Card issued by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) as well as a copy of an official receipt from ICE showing that the candidate's application for citizenship has been received. Note: "proof of mailing" from the Postal Service is not equivalent to a receipt issued by ICE.

Where an application for citizenship is not completed within three years, there is a presumption that the candidate is not cooperating with ICE. Any delays which push the application period beyond that three-year period must be the documented responsibility of ICE, rather than due to the failure of the candidate to complete the process.

⁴⁰ 8 USC §1324a

⁴¹ VC §2267

- Public Safety Dispatchers – There are no unique citizenship requirements for public safety dispatchers; therefore, the dispatcher PHS only asks, "Are you legally authorized for permanent employment in the United States?"

BIRTH PLACE AND BIRTH DATE

Birth place and birth date is collected for identification purposes, for fingerprinting, and to verify that peace officer candidates meet the minimum age requirement of 18 years old.⁴² Note that both federal and state laws prohibit employment discrimination based on age and national origin.

Age can be verified by presentation of a valid birth certificate or other documents as described above for verifying citizenship requirements.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER

A Social Security number is collected to obtain credit records, Employment Development Department employment histories, employment files, and other information (including POST Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Profile Records). Care must be taken to ensure that this information is not shared with unauthorized individuals and is otherwise kept private.

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION AND PHOTOGRAPHS

Photographs, as well as a physical description of the candidate (e.g., height, weight, hair color, eye color) can be very useful for positive identification purposes during the background investigation. The photograph should be taken when the candidate meets with the background investigator to start the background process. There are some candidate protection rules regarding use of photographs:

- Photographs are not permitted at time of initial application and may not be used as a basis for employment discrimination.
- Candidates cannot be made to pay for their own photograph.

PHS Section 2: Relatives and References

This section requests contact information on:

- Parents (including step-parents and in-laws)
- Spouses/Registered Domestic Partners (current and former)
- Siblings (including half, step, foster, etc.)
- Children (including natural, adopted, step, and foster)
- References other than family members or individuals listed elsewhere

⁴² GC §1031\(b\)

Commission Regulations 1953 and 1959 require that, within practical limits, background investigators contact the references supplied by the candidate, and other references supplied by these initial contacts, to determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought. Anyone who knows the candidate is a potential source of information. Typically, different types of personal associations with the candidate will lead to familiarity with different facets of the candidate's background. These individuals' greatest value may be as sources of information for secondary references; that is, other individuals who know the candidate but were not listed as such by the candidate. Sometimes secondary references prove to be more candid than primary references supplied by the candidate.

The number of contacts that are initiated is largely up to the common sense and good judgment of the investigators and their reviewing authorities. In general, more contacts are better than few, but investigators and their agencies are ultimately responsible for determining to what length an investigation must go. Every contact attempted should be documented

Not every person or entity contacted will respond to a request for interview, return a phone call, or complete and mail back a questionnaire. The duty to cooperate with background investigations is a matter of public policy; however, except in very narrow circumstances, there is no legal obligation to do so. Background investigators should document even unsuccessful attempts to contact references

FAMILY MEMBERS

Family members often have the most long-term and in-depth knowledge of the candidate. Relatives may be able to provide information about the candidate's traits and temperament, academic problems and learning ability, legal misconduct (e.g., arrests and/or lawsuits), as well as names of others who are familiar with the candidate. That longstanding relationship with the candidate may, however, affect the objectivity of the information provided. Investigators must judge the completeness and accuracy of that information on a case-by-case basis.

It is recommended that the investigator inquire into whether the candidate has had serious interpersonal problems, including whether the candidate has had any marital problems or any problems with physical or psychological abuse. This does not mean, however, that the investigator should examine every minor family disagreement and dispute, nor unnecessarily violate a family's privacy. The purpose, rather, is to inquire into problems that are of sufficient severity to affect job performance and therefore the candidate's qualifications.

The investigator should be aware that attitudes of the spouse or other close personal relations regarding the candidate joining the department might affect that person's ability to objectively evaluate the candidate's qualifications. The investigator may find it useful to ascertain those attitudes.

Officers and dispatchers have been known to be susceptible to the influence of unprincipled relatives or acquaintances; therefore, such information uncovered during the investigation should be examined. However, having relatives or acquaintances with a criminal or unsavory past should not be an automatic basis for disqualification. Instead, the investigator should focus on the candidate's behavior regarding such relatives or acquaintances and the degree of the candidate's susceptibility to such influence.

MARITAL STATUS

An individual's marital status is prohibited as a basis for employment discrimination.⁴³ No judgments should be made about the candidate's current marital status (i.e., married, single, separated, or divorced), nor should routine inquiry be made into the facts surrounding the candidate's decision to marry or remain single.

FORMER SPOUSE(S)/FORMER REGISTERED DOMESTIC PARTNER(S)

As of July 1, 2009, peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates must show proof of dissolution of marriage even if they have not subsequently remarried. Besides helping establish legal rights of survivorship or medical decision-making, dissolution documents can contain highly relevant information concerning a candidate's character or financial well-being. Restraining orders, allegations of domestic violence, property settlements, and continuing financial obligations may be detailed in such documents.

Although a copy of the final judgment is sufficient, an inspection of the full file has the benefit of indicating any current or past restraining orders. The final judgment should be inspected to ensure that a final date of dissolution (not merely a request for final judgment) is entered. For candidates who were divorced outside of the United States while they were a citizen of another country, proof of marriage dissolution is often easier to establish by reviewing their Certificate of Naturalization, rather than attempting to translate and verify the legal sufficiency of a foreign document.

Former spouses or domestic partners can be the source of very useful information for a wide variety of uses, including employment history, residences, financial problems, drug use, and other facts. The reason for the break-up itself can provide useful information. The given reasons should be confirmed, whenever possible, by obtaining a copy of the dissolution of marriage or domestic partnership, or checking the civil filing index of the court in order to uncover further information. The investigator should also confirm that child support, if any, is up-to-date.

Any information gathered from a prior spouse/partner should be carefully evaluated and corroborated. Ill feelings generated by dissolution can cause hostility towards the candidate, which can affect the honesty of the information provided. However, if serious acts of wrongdoing are alleged, every effort should be made to verify those claims through additional sources. For example, if acts of domestic violence are claimed, the investigation should include determining whether police reports were filed and/or court restraining orders were sought.

CHILDREN

Generally, the behavior of the candidate's offspring should not be used in evaluating the candidate's acceptability. Exceptions would be the situations in which the candidate knowingly supported or contributed to the delinquent behavior of the offspring, or there is evidence of abuse or neglect. Support of dependents is a separate question, which is addressed later in this chapter in the Financial section.

⁴³ GC §12900 et seq.

OTHER REFERENCES

Anyone who has lived with or has had a relationship with the candidate is a potential source of relevant information, depending upon the nature of their relationship and how recently that relationship existed. Therefore, the context, frequency of contact, and length of the candidate's relationship with the relative, reference, or acquaintance should be investigated. However, no judgments should be made based on the mere fact of the gender of the individual with whom the candidate has resided.

Some references, even those supplied by the candidate, will be quite reluctant to provide disparaging information about the individual. It is critical that a valid authorization form from the candidate be provided along with an explanation of the protection afforded to the information they provide. An example authorization form for peace officer candidates is included in Table 5.3.

The background investigator is encouraged to solicit secondary references from the relative, reference, or acquaintance. The secondary and other references can often provide the investigator with valuable insight and information that listed references may not be willing to furnish.

References should be asked about the candidate's participation in illegal or unethical conduct, as well as their reputation for honesty and integrity. Specific instances of illegal or unethical activity should be corroborated whenever possible. Other useful topic areas include candidate drug use, financial difficulties, racial or ethnic biases, strengths and weaknesses, and their understanding of the reasons underlying their interest in a career in law enforcement.

Ideally, relatives and references should be interviewed in person. However, if the individuals to be contacted are not within a geographical area that makes personal interviews feasible, contacts may be made by telephone or letter. A sample letter and questionnaire are located in Tables 5.4A and 5.4B.

PHS Section 3: Education

This section requests information on secondary and post-secondary education, including:

- Degrees and certificates
- Dates attended and units completed
- Trade, vocational, or business schools/institutes attended
- Attendance at a POST Basic Academy/Public Safety Dispatcher Basic Course
- History of academic discipline, suspension, or expulsion

Peace officer candidates must have achieved a high school diploma or equivalent.⁴⁴ No minimum educational standards are established for public safety dispatchers; however, educational information listed on their PHS must be verified.

VERIFYING MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS – PEACE OFFICERS

Government Code §1031\(e\) established the following education standards for peace officers; however, this does not preclude an agency from establishing higher, job-related post-secondary education requirements. All peace officers must have attained one of the following:

- Graduated from an acceptable United States public high school, Department of Defense high school, or accredited or approved public or non-public high school, OR
- Passed the General Education Development (GED) test, OR
- Passed the California High School Proficiency Examination, OR
- Attained a two-year, four-year, or advanced degree from an accredited college or university.

U.S. public high schools are acceptable if they meet the high school standards set by the state in which the school is located. The status of a public high school, as well as many private schools, can be checked by contacting that state's Department of Education, or the local school district itself. A list of state education departments can be accessed at <http://www2.ed.gov/about/contacts/state/index.html?src=ln> .

To comply with Government Code §1031(e), nonpublic high schools as well as post-secondary institutions must be accredited or approved by:

- A state or local government educational agency,
- A regional accrediting association,
- An accrediting association recognized by the Secretary of the US Department of Education or holding full membership in the National Council for Private School Accreditation (NCPSA) or the National Federation of Nonpublic School State Accrediting Associations (NFSSAA), OR
- An organization holding full membership in the Commission on International and Trans-Regional Accreditation (CITA) or the Council for American Private Education (CAPE).

Accredited U.S. Department of Defense (DOD) high schools are also sanctioned by Government Code §1031(e). The status of a DOD school can be checked at www.dodea.edu.

There are a limited number of foreign schools that meet the criteria stipulated in Government Code §1031(e). These include overseas schools operated by the Department of Defense schools, foreign schools accredited by an association recognized by one of the accrediting agencies recognized by the Secretary of the United States Department of Education, or one of the four additional associations that oversee the accreditation of private institutions (i.e., NCPSA, CITA, CAPE, and NFSSAA).

Official transcripts are the only authoritative means of verifying a person's educational background. Transcripts from accredited institutions will bear the regional accreditation stamp. Some candidates may be reluctant to furnish original transcripts because of the fees involved or the steps necessary to arrange for them. Not uncommonly, however, the reason that candidates fail to furnish original transcripts is because their academic records have been impounded for payment of fees or loans still due the school, a fact that may serve as another legitimate area of concern.

If official records are not available through any source, and the candidate does not have any of the other qualifications outlined in GC §1031(e), s/he will need to complete a GED.

RELATED EDUCATIONAL BACKGROUND INQUIRIES

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(5) and 1959(e)(4) require that an investigation must be made into the high school and all higher educational institutions that the candidate attended. At a minimum, this investigation should verify that the information supplied by the candidate on the PHS was accurate. School personnel may also provide useful information if the candidate has recently finished school. This is especially true if there is any record of disciplinary actions, such as suspensions, expulsions or any other form of academic punishment.

It can be particularly useful to contact staff from the candidate's Basic Police Academy or Public Safety Dispatcher Academy. Academy staff are especially likely to remember candidates who stood out from their classmates.

PHS Section 4 Residence

This section requires candidates to detail their residential history for the past 10 years (or since the age of 15), including:

- Addresses
- Dates resided
- Contact information for property manager, rent collector, or owner
- Roommate/housemate contact information
- Reasons for moving
- History of being evicted or asked to leave a residence
- History of leaving a residence owing rent

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(9) and 1959(e)(8) stipulate that the background investigation include "contacts and interviews with current, and where practicable, previous neighbors to determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought." An investigation of residential history facilitates local police record inquiries, as well as providing information about the candidate from neighbors, landlords, roommates, and others acquainted with the candidate.

A neighborhood check is not merely a restatement of a candidate's residential history. Rather, it includes contacting a sampling of neighbors (and landlords) to determine if any job-relevant behaviors can be identified and documenting those contacts.

The security provisions in some housing complexes will not permit neighbors to be canvassed. Committing a potential criminal trespass to accomplish a neighborhood check is not required, and information gleaned from the property owner may be all that is available.

When interviewing neighbors, the background investigator should inquire into how well the neighbor is acquainted with the candidate, whether there have been any incidents requiring a law enforcement response at the candidate's residence, and how the candidate interacts with others in the neighborhood. Contacts with landlords and property managers should include inquiries into the candidate's timeliness in paying rent, complaints from other neighbors or tenants about the candidate, and whether the property was vacated with the proper notice and left in good repair. Information gleaned from these interviews should be maintained in the background narrative report.

If personal interviews with landlords are not feasible, inquiries may be made by letter. Tables 5.5A and 5.5B include a sample letter and background questionnaire for landlords.

PHS Section 5

Experience and Employment

Information about the candidate's past work behavior and performance is of tremendous value when determining the individual's suitability for employment. Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(6\) requires an investigation of a peace officer candidate's employment history for a minimum of the past 10 years; however, the peace officer PHS requires candidates to document their entire employment history (and, in the case of dispatcher candidates, their employment for the past 10 years). Information inquiries include:

- Employer name, location, and dates and status of employment
- Job titles and duties
- Name and contact information for supervisors and coworkers
- Reasons for leaving (or wanting to leave)
- Dates and reasons for periods of unemployment
- History of counterproductive work behavior, including:
 - Disciplinary actions
 - Being fired, released from probation, or asked to resign
 - Workplace violence
 - Resignation in lieu of termination
 - Subject of written complaints or counseling for poor performance
 - Subject of discrimination accusations
 - Attendance problems
 - Unsatisfactory performance reviews
 - Misuse of confidential information
 - Misuse of sick leave
 - Poor performance as a result of drug/alcohol consumption
- History and status of applications to other law enforcement agencies

GENERAL AREAS OF EMPLOYMENT HISTORY INQUIRY

At a minimum, investigators should:

- Contact past employers and co-workers
- Inquire into the reason(s) for the candidate's having had no prior employment or extended gaps in employment.

- Inquire into whether the candidate has ever been fired or asked to resign from any place of employment and the circumstances surrounding the termination or resignation
- Inquire into a candidate's reason for leaving a job if that reason is other than being fired or being asked to leave
- Inquire into the facts that formed the basis for rejection of the candidate from another position requiring peace officer powers
- Inquire into whether the candidate has ever received unemployment insurance, workers compensation, or other state or federal assistance through fraudulent means

POST regulations require the investigation of a peace officer candidate's past ten years of employment. However, there may be circumstances where an agency feels the need to investigate beyond that ten year period because of answers furnished on the PHS, such as an indication of significant disciplinary problems, terminations, prior police experience, etc.

EMPLOYERS

Quite often, both public and private employers refuse to speak to investigators, or refer to their designated spokespersons who provide very limited information. GC §1031.1 was specifically added to facilitate obtaining written employment information from present or past employers of peace officer candidates who are not currently employed as peace officers.⁴⁵ It requires these employers to disclose relevant information to background investigators, including performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, etc., however:

- The request must be made in writing
- The request must be accompanied by a notarized letter from the candidate releasing the employer of liability
- The request and authorization must be presented to the employer by a sworn officer of the employing agency (or other designee)
- The disclosed information remains confidential, even though the information may be released to other law enforcement agencies that are also conducting a peace officer background investigation; the receiving agency must reconfirm the information.

Past and present employers are entitled to charge reasonable fees to reimburse costs incurred in furnishing the information.

A sample of a written request for information, including a copy of GC §1031.1, is included in Tables 5.6A and 5.6B. Note that individual employers may have their own specific requirements and release forms to be completed before they provide information.

Access to employment information on past or current employees of a public agency but who are not covered by GC §1031.1 is guaranteed by the California Public Records Act.⁴⁶

Dear Mr./Ms. _____:

_____ [Name of Candidate] _____, who was employed by your firm from _____ to _____, is a candidate for the position of peace officer in this department. We are asking your assistance in helping to determine his/her qualifications for the position by supplying us with employment information regarding this individual.

Government Code §1031.1 requires employers to disclose written employment information when a person is applying for a peace officer position. A copy of the law is attached for you. An employer has an obligation to disclose written employment information, which includes information in connection with job applications, performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, and other information relevant to peace officer performance (except information prohibited from disclosure by any other state or federal law or regulation).

We would appreciate your cooperation in providing the above employment information regarding _____ [Name of Candidate] _____. We are accompanying this request with a notarized authorization releasing you from civil liability. We would be glad to cover any costs you incur in copying and furnishing these documents to us. Of course, your responses are absolutely privileged under the law.

Attachment

GOVERNMENT CODE SECTION 1031.1

1031.1. (a) For purposes of performing a thorough background investigation for candidates not currently employed as a peace officer, as required by subdivision (d) of §1031, an employer shall disclose employment information relating to a current or former employee, upon request of a law enforcement agency, if all of the following conditions are met:

- (1) The request is made in writing.
- (2) The request is accompanied by a notarized authorization by the candidate releasing the employer of liability.
- (3) The request and the authorization are presented to the employer by a sworn officer or other authorized representative of the employing law enforcement agency.

(b) In the absence of fraud or malice, no employer shall be subject to any civil liability for any relevant cause of action by virtue of releasing employment information required pursuant to this section. Nothing in this section is intended to, nor does in any way or manner, abrogate or lessen the existing common law or statutory privileges and immunities of an employer.

(c) For purposes of this section, "employment information" includes written information in connection with job applications, performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, and other information relevant to peace officer performance, except information prohibited from disclosure by any other state or federal law or regulation.

(d) An employer's refusal to disclose information to a law enforcement agency in accordance with this section shall constitute grounds for a civil action for injunctive relief requiring disclosure on the part of an employer.

(e) Employment information disclosed by an employer to an initial requesting law enforcement agency shall be deemed confidential. However, the initial requesting law enforcement agency may disclose this information to another authorized law enforcement agency that is also conducting a peace officer background investigation. Whenever this information is disclosed to another law enforcement agency, that agency shall utilize the information for investigative leads only and the information shall be independently verified by that agency in order to be used in determining the suitability of a peace officer candidate.

(f) An employer may charge reasonable fees to cover actual costs incurred in copying and furnishing documents to law enforcement agencies as required by this section.

Dispatcher applicants should not be asked to complete waivers designed for peace officer applicants; rather, separate waivers should be designed for that purpose. Investigators can reassure references contacted in the course of such backgrounds that similar legal privilege (per Civil Code §47) may apply (but only if the agency is in the POST Public Safety Dispatcher Program, thereby making a background investigation a legal requirement).

Some past employers maintain records only for limited periods of time, others cease operations, and still others even decline to respond to those requests even though they are legally required to do so (i.e., GC §1031.1, peace officers). To satisfy POST, every contact with a current or past employer, even an unsuccessful one, needs to be documented. The extent to which the department is willing to pursue remedies under the law to attempt to obtain this information is governed by the department and their legal counsel, not by POST. It is also up to the agency to decide the impact of an inability to obtain meaningful (or any) information from a present or former employer.

CC §47\(b\)\(3\) confers absolute privilege on the persons who are contacted or who come forward on legally mandated backgrounds (i.e., peace officers and public safety dispatchers in the POST program). As discussed in Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework,” information that is privileged may not be introduced in a court proceeding if it is adverse to the interests of the provider of that information. This protection should be spelled out in a notarized letter from the candidate releasing the employer from liability, such as in the sample letter for entry-level peace officer candidates found in Table 5.7, and the comparable letter for dispatcher candidates located in Table 5.8. Employers can also be reminded of the legal risks associated with providing inaccurate evaluations, either highly positive or negative.

Information from the employer should include, if at all possible:

- A verification of the dates of employment and the position held
- An examination of the original application documents to assure that the candidate is disclosing his/her entire job history
- An assessment of the candidate's job skills and reputation as an employee
- Identification of any performance problems or work habits, including the ability to work with others and as part of a team
- The candidate's attendance and punctuality record or other indications of dependability
- The real reason why the employee is leaving or has left that employer
- If the former employer would recommend or rehire that person

Before drawing any conclusions, the background investigator should establish or refute the veracity of any negative information; to the extent possible, the employer's observations should be supported with official records. Any discrepancies between these personal assessments and the official record should be explored. Investigators must keep in mind that many employers, even public employers, often fail to document assessments of work performance, and an official record may be very difficult, if not impossible, to access.

EMPLOYMENT INFORMATION – PEACE OFFICER

CANDIDATE NAME:

California Government Code §1031, subdivision (d), provides that each class of Public Officer or Employees declared by law to be Peace Officers shall "Be of good moral character, as determined by a thorough background investigation."

All responses to inquiries are protected, even if unsolicited, by the absolute privilege of California Civil Code §47, subsections (b) and (c), and California Government Code §1031.1.

As a candidate for a position with the _____ [insert employer's name] _____, I am required to furnish information for use in determining my qualifications. For this purpose, I authorize release of any and all information you may have concerning me, including but not limited to, information of a confidential or privileged nature, or any data or materials that have been sealed or agreed to be withheld pursuant to any prior agreement or court proceeding involving disciplinary matters.

I hereby acknowledge that I have been advised that the records or information contained therein may be considered confidential under California Penal Code §832.7, and therefore subject to discovery or disclosure only pursuant to a noticed motion under California Evidence Code §1043. By signing this authorization I hereby waive any and all rights to have any record or records or information contained therein discovered or disclosed only by a noticed motion pursuant to California Evidence Code §1043, and hereby authorize the disclosure of all records to which, as an employee, the undersigned would have or did have access.

I hereby release, discharge, and exonerate the agency, their agents, representatives, and/or any person furnishing information, from liability arising out of the furnishing and/or inspection of records and/or other truthful, even though potentially embarrassing, information.

It is further understood, acknowledged, and agreed to, that any information secured pursuant to this statutorily required background investigation, which would negatively reflect on my fitness for duty, will be forwarded to my current law enforcement employer.

This release shall be binding on my legal representatives, heirs, and assigns.

SUPERVISORS AND CO-WORKERS

Current and past co-workers and supervisors can serve as useful sources of information, as well as a source of leads to additional co-workers, friends, and other useful contacts. As with all references, the relevance and usefulness of the information provided by these individuals depends upon how recently they worked with the candidate, for how long, and the nature of their working relationship. Any information provided by supervisors and co-workers - positive or negative - should be carefully evaluated and corroborated.

If past employers and supervisors cannot be interviewed personally, contact may be made by letter or by telephone. A sample letter and questionnaire that can be used to contact the past and present employers are found in Tables 5.9A and 5.9B.

PERIODS OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The PHS requires candidates to indicate all periods of unemployment and reason for the unemployment, choosing from five categories: student, between jobs, leave of absence, travel, and other. As discussed in the section on disability discrimination, medical inquiries are prohibited prior to a conditional offer of employment. However, it is permissible to question any gaps or sudden departures of employment per se, even if it may elicit information about a medical condition or disability. Medical information volunteered in response to this line of questioning should not be pursued until and unless the candidate receives a conditional job offer.

REASON FOR LEAVING A JOB

While inquiring into the reasons for the candidate's leaving a job is recommended, caution must be exercised. Limited employment opportunity is a valid and acceptable reason for terminating an employment relationship, as are hostile work environments, unlawful terms of employment, relocation, and other explanations.

CURRENT EMPLOYER

A current employer or supervisor may present a biased or inaccurate picture of the candidate in order to encourage (or discourage) employment of the candidate elsewhere. The investigator must exercise caution and ensure that any information, either positive or negative, is carefully evaluated and corroborated.

The investigator should avoid deliberately placing a candidate's present job in jeopardy. If on the PHS, the candidate indicated that there would be a problem if the current employer were contacted, it is lawful to defer contact with that employer until after a conditional offer of employment has been extended. In this case, the investigator should contact the present employer only after all other candidate screening steps have taken place.⁴⁷

REJECTION FROM ANOTHER PEACE OFFICER OR PUBLIC SAFETY DISPATCHER POSITION

The investigator should inquire into the facts surrounding the rejection for any other peace officer or public safety dispatcher position. Resulting information must be carefully verified and evaluated; it should not automatically be assumed that the previous investigation was unbiased, thorough, and complete. Furthermore, different agencies may have different minimum standards (such as age, education, drug use history, residency, etc.); therefore, the investigator should assess whether the reasons for such a rejection are relevant to the present employer. Another employer's reason for rejection is not automatically relevant. Agencies should reject unsuitable candidates based on their own job-relevant criteria rather than those of another agency (especially if those reasons have not been independently verified or are deemed irrelevant, outdated, or otherwise inapplicable).

NOTE: Effective January 1, 2010, DOJ is required to provide the date and name of every agency that has previously requested a search of the candidate's pre-employment criminal history PC [§11105\(k\) and \(l\)].

PHS Section 6 Military

Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(10\) requires that the background investigation of peace officer candidates include an evaluation of military records in the service of the United States, jurisdictions therein, or foreign government, to determine the quality of the individual's service and proof of Selective Service registration where required by law. The same investigation is required of public safety dispatcher candidates, per Regulation 1959\(e\)\(9\).

This section of the PHS requires candidates to detail their military history, including:

- Selective Service registration (if applicable)
- Branch of service and dates
- Type of discharge
- Current status as a reservist
- Disciplinary actions, judicial and non-judicial
- Security clearance problems

The candidate's participation in the National Guard or a reserve component of the armed services is protected by the Military and Veterans Code §394. It is a misdemeanor to discriminate against a reservist in any aspect of employment.

SELECTIVE SERVICE REGISTRATION

In July 1980, Congress restored the Selective Service registration, requiring all males (excluding the sons of foreign diplomats) born on or after January 1, 1960 to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday, and up to the age of 26 they are required to notify the Selective Service of changes in name, address, or telephone number.

Information on the candidate's compliance with current registration requirements can be obtained from the Selective Service System at their website (www.sss.gov). If proof of registration is not available on the website, a letter should be written to the Selective Service System. A sample written inquiry is provided in Table 5.10.

Note that since 1973, the military uses the individual's social security number for identification purposes.

Willful failure to register with the Selective Service (Title 50a US Code 453) is not a disqualifier under POST regulations. Any explanation to justify a failure to register must be made by the applicant to the agency administering the right, benefit, or privilege for which Selective Service System registration is required.

MILITARY SERVICE HISTORY

Military service records should be requested on candidates who have served in the military. Military records can be obtained by using either a Standard Form 180⁴⁸ or an equivalent form developed by the agency. Information on how to obtain military service records can be found by matching the candidate's service history with the records repositories listed on the back of the SF 180. To ensure that complete information is received, a letter, signed by the candidate, can be submitted that specifies the exact information requested, including:

- copies of personnel records,
- copies of DD-214s,
- eligibility for reenlistment,
- records of judicial and non-judicial punishments,
- performance ratings, and other records.

A sample letter is provided in Table 5.11. Note that the letter should include:

- candidate's full name while in the military,
- military service number,⁴⁹
- dates of entry/discharge into/from the military, and
- whether the candidate was an officer or enlisted and which branch of service.

Requests should be sent to the appropriate military records custodian, as listed on the last page of SF 180.

DD-214

Candidates who have been in the military are almost always issued a report of separation each time they are released/discharged from active duty. Individuals may have one or more such report, depending on their military history.

There are two versions of the DD-214: a short form (Copy 1) and a long form (Copy 4). Commission Regulations 1953(e)(10) and 1959(e)(9) require investigators to examine the long form (Copy 4), as it contains the candidate's reentry code, separation code, and separation authority. Investigators should always examine an original document.

With the exception of some "entry-level separations," virtually anyone who enters the military will be issued discharge documents at their time of separation. If the candidate possesses a DD-214 "short form" (Copy 1), it is almost inconceivable that they were not issued a "long form" (Copy 4), as well (they are generally stapled together).

⁴⁹ Since 1973, the military uses the individual's social security number for identification purposes.

Currently, inquiries directed to the Army and Air Force generally produce less comprehensive replies. However, most recent veterans can obtain copies of their separation documents on-line. [Note: many military records issued prior to 1973 were destroyed in a catastrophic fire at the National Personnel Records Center, although the number of applicants facing that issue is rapidly declining].

RE-ENTRY CODES

Although re-entry codes reflect a variety of things, a "1" or "2" generally indicates that there were no problems. A "3" indicates some substantial issue that needs to be explored because re-enlistment would require a waiver by the service branch. A "4" indicates that re-enlistment would be prohibited and must be carefully explored.

TYPE OF DISCHARGE/CHARACTER OF SERVICE

The DD-214 will list one of five possible entries under "character of service" (type of discharge):

- 1) Honorable
- 2) General – under honorable conditions (less than full honorable)
- 3) Other than honorable conditions (OTH or UD)
- 4) Bad conduct discharge (BCD) – resulting from a special court martial
- 5) Dishonorable discharge – resulting from a general court martial. No longer considered a veteran.

Because reason for separation, type of discharge, and re-enlistment codes appear only in predetermined combinations on genuine DD-214s, a local armed forces recruiter can help if assistance is needed in interpreting the meaning of these or other codes. However, federal privacy laws prohibit identifying the service member when discussing the form.

CURRENT MILITARY STATUS

The PHS asks the candidate to indicate any current military obligations (military reserve or National Guard program). When the candidate indicates a current military obligation, the current unit, co-workers, and supervisors should be treated no differently than a civilian job.

MILITARY DISCIPLINE

Inquiry into judicial and non-judicial military disciplinary action may reflect upon the candidate's suitability. Such information should be explained in the PHS and verified through military records (i.e., DD-214 or other available records), or through contact with military acquaintances or commanding officers.

CONTACT PAST COMMANDING OFFICERS OR MILITARY ACQUAINTANCES

When interviewing commanding officers and military acquaintances, the investigator might ask questions such as:

- When or how long ago did you know the candidate?
- How well did you know the candidate?
- Was the candidate ever the subject of any disciplinary action?

- Do you know if the candidate got along well with others?
 - Can you think of any reason why the candidate might not be qualified to work in a law enforcement agency?

PHS Section 7 Financial

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(11\) and 1959\(e\)\(10\) require that a credit check be performed on peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates, “to determine the candidate’s credit standing with lenders, as an indication of the candidate’s dependability and integrity.” This section requires the candidate to provide an estimate of his/her income and expenditures, and to respond to specific questions associated with history of fiscal responsibility, including.

- Bankruptcy filings
- Contact by collection agencies
- Repossessions
- Wage garnishments
- Delinquencies, failure to pay, or cheating on taxes
- Employment bond refusals
- Defaulting or avoiding repayment on loans
- Debts due to gambling
- Expenditures on illegal activities
- Failure to make court-ordered payments
- Bad checks

Although an important area of investigation, the evaluation of a candidate’s behavior regarding the handling of finances must be careful and judicious. In some instances, outwardly negative information may involve legal rights and even factors that are completely outside of the candidate’s control. Financial opportunities can be limited as much by race, gender, marital status, and even geography as by willful acts of the candidate. It is therefore critically important to understand the full circumstances surrounding any apparently negative financial information.

SOURCE OF INCOME

Investigators are permitted to inquire into the source of any income reported by the candidate, including wages, salary, or money earned by other means. Provided that the source of income is lawful, investigators should not draw conclusions about a candidate merely based on the amount of money earned.

EXPENDITURES

It is permissible to inquire into the amount of money a candidate claims to spend on a monthly basis. However, assuming that the expenditures are for a lawful purpose, how a candidate chooses to spend money is generally not relevant. Instead, the focus should address the following questions: Does the reported income support the expenditures that a candidate claims? Do the reported expenditures correspond with the obligations appearing on the credit report? Does the candidate meet the obligations that he or she has agreed to assume?

BANKRUPTCY

Individuals have three essential avenues in which bankruptcy may be pursued: Chapter 7 (discharge of debt), Chapter 11 (business-related protection from creditors), and Chapter 13 (individual reorganization of debt).

Bankruptcy is a legal right. Absent any evidence of fraud, the mere fact that a candidate has undergone bankruptcy cannot be the sole basis upon which employment is denied.⁵⁰ Investigators may inquire into the circumstances that led up to bankruptcy, including the examination of supporting court records regarding reported assets and liabilities at the time when the bankruptcy petition was filed. Once filed with the United States District Court, these are public records.

State law forbids a consumer/credit reporting agency from reporting any fully discharged bankruptcy that is more than ten years old Civil Code [§1786.18\(a\)\(1\)].

BILLS TURNED OVER FOR COLLECTION AND REPOSSESSIONS

In many cases, collection activity and repossessions are indicative of problem behavior. Investigators should take care to assure that the bill in collection is, in fact, the responsibility of the candidate against whose credit it has been reported and that any repossession reported similarly applies to the candidate. Investigators should then inquire as to why the bill had to be turned over to collection or why repossession was necessary.

GARNISHMENTS

At one time, garnishments were almost always indicative of a candidate's failure to meet obligations. Today, however, as in the case of child support obligations, many courts automatically garnish wages, even where there has been no history of delinquencies. In some cases, tax payment plans can, for the convenience of the taxpayer, be automatically garnished from wages and frequently involve liens against the taxpayer's credit record.

TAX DELINQUENCIES

The failure to satisfy lawful tax obligations may have a significant financial impact on a candidate's suitability. However, the reasons for the delinquencies may be more important than the delinquencies themselves. Unforeseen tax liabilities (wild fluctuations in company stock options, non-liquid inheritances, liquidation of property forced by marriage dissolution, criminal activities by a spouse or former spouse, and even changes in tax law) may or may not reflect upon a candidate. This is a legally complex area. Investigators may be best served by conducting a case-by-case review of a candidate's situation and should be open to authoritative interpretations by tax professionals.

⁵⁰ 11 USC §525

CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTS

A great deal of financial information is obtainable from consumer credit reporting agencies, and they often provide a timely and inexpensive means by which to assemble summary credit information.

Information obtained from a credit-reporting agency may include name, age, spouse's name, number of dependents, former addresses, occupation, employer, monthly income, paying habits, number of accounts maintained, balances on accounts, and case history of accounts. However, caution should be exercised when reviewing credit information. It is possible that these credit reports may contain some erroneous information. All credit reports should be verified for accuracy, and candidates must be furnished a free copy of that report if it is to be used contrary to their interests. Any circumstance surrounding any negative information should be evaluated on its own merits.

Recognizing that credit reports are frequently inaccurate, both the U.S. Congress and the California Legislature have imposed procedural safeguards to reduce the likelihood that an individual can be unwittingly denied employment based upon erroneous credit information. Background investigators may subject their agencies to unnecessary civil liability in the event that they fail to follow the disclosure rules present in the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 United States Code 1681) and the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civil Code Sections 1785.20 fail 1785.20.5).

Title 15 USC 1681 §604\(b\), effective September 30, 1997, supersedes the provisions of the California Civil Code regarding an employer's use of credit information. Candidates must be notified that a prospective employer may consider credit history in evaluating suitability for appointment. Under the law, candidates must be informed of their rights under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) before any adverse decision can be made.

A sample credit data advisement form is provided in Table 5.12. This form (and all other forms provided in this manual) should only be used in consultation with the agency's legal counsel.

Credit scores generally have little to do with one's suitability for employment; in fact, that is one of the reasons why the major Credit Reporting Agencies do not include those numbers on employment documents. Further, the unsettled economy and so-called "credit crunch" has had an impact on things such as credit scores and credit lines, even where an individual has a perfect payment record. Credit itself, or even the lack thereof, may have limited bearing on someone's suitability for employment as a peace officer.

Instead, the background investigation should concern itself with issues such as whether the reported sources of income are lawful and fully accounted for, whether the candidate meets his/her obligations as agreed, and the reasons underlying any indications of credit problems (e.g., are the credit problems the fault/responsibility of the candidate, or are they related to the actions of others? Free-falling real estate values have placed many individuals in unanticipated hardship). Some candidates have no credit history at all, while others may have extraordinary resources.

ADVISEMENT TO CANDIDATE

REGARDING CREDIT INFORMATION FOR EMPLOYMENT PURPOSES

The U.S. Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) of 1996 [15 U.S. Code 1681, §604(b)] and California's Consumer Credit Agencies Act (Civil Code §1785.20.5) require that you be notified separately of your rights before any prospective employer may use credit data as part of an employment decision. In some cases, an evaluation of your financial history is mandated by law [California Code of Regulations, Title 11, Sections 1953(e)(11)/1959(e)(10)], or by policy of your prospective employer.

You are hereby notified that your prospective employer intends to use credit data as part of its decision-making process for the position for which you have applied. The Credit Reporting Agency (CRA), which will furnish this data, will be _____ [Name of Credit Agency] located at _____ [Agency Address] _____. Their telephone number is _____ [Area Code - Number] _____. You will automatically be furnished a copy of this report, but before any adverse actions are taken as a result of this document, you are advised of the following:

1. Access to your file is limited to persons recognized by the FCRA;
2. Your consent is required for reports that are provided to employers or that contain medical information;
3. You can find out what is in your file, although some information, such as "risk sources" or "credit scores" may be lawfully withheld;
4. You have been informed of the name, address, and telephone number of the CRA which is furnishing this data;
5. You can dispute inaccurate information with the CRA;
6. Inaccurate information must be corrected or deleted;
7. Outdated information may not be reported (seven years for most information, ten years for bankruptcies);
8. You may choose to exclude your name from the CRA list for unsolicited credit and insurance offers;
9. You may seek damages from violators, and;
10. The complete text of this act may be found at www.ftc.gov.

CERTIFICATION: I certify that _____ [Name of Hiring Agency] _____ has my consent to obtain a copy of my credit report for the limited purpose of my pre-employment background investigation; that I have been furnished with the name, address, and telephone number of the CRA, I have been informed that I will receive a copy of my credit report and that I have been informed in summary form of my rights under the FCRA.

PRACTICAL CONSIDERATIONS

Investigators should take heed of the following:

- Financial data is extremely sensitive. Take steps to safeguard it.
- Always be wary of the accuracy of financial data, whether furnished by the candidate or by some other source. It is notoriously inaccurate.
- Whenever conducting a credit check of candidates for employment purposes, a candidate's signed consent is necessary.
- Whenever credit reports are used for adverse employment purposes, the candidate is entitled to a free copy of any such report under federal law.
- Whenever a candidate for employment is rejected from employment, in part or in whole, based upon credit information, the candidate must be informed.
- The mere fact of bankruptcy cannot be the sole basis upon which a candidate is denied employment.
- Concentrate on whether a candidate's income and expenditures are lawful, properly reported, and satisfied in a timely manner.
- Absent fraud or conspiracy, financial data pertaining to the candidate's family, business partners, and even spouses (in some cases) are generally irrelevant and not permitted.
- Candidates who are self-employed may need to produce documents such as financial statements from an accountant or even tax returns to support their claimed income.

Investigators should not, however, collect such sensitive documents unless necessary.

PHS Section 8

Legal

California law⁵¹ and POST regulations⁵² require that the background investigation include a review of specific sources of information, including:

- Criminal records of the California Department of Justice
- All police files in jurisdictions where the candidate has resided, worked, or frequently visited
- The Federal Bureau of Investigation records
- The State Department of Motor Vehicles, Division of Drivers Licenses

This PHS section requires the candidates to detail their history of involvement with legal authorities, as well as to recount illegal but undetected activities. This includes:

- Arrests, detentions, diversion programs (peace officers), and convictions (peace officers and public safety dispatchers)
- Probation

⁵¹ Government Code §1029

⁵² Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\),\(4\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\),\(3\)

- Civil lawsuits
- Referrals to Child Protective Services⁵³
- Home visits by law enforcement officers
- Being the subject of emergency protective and related court orders
- Filing of fraudulent claims (e.g., welfare, worker's compensation)
- Misdemeanor-level acts (past seven years)
- Felony-level acts (lifetime)
- Current illegal drug use and history of recreational drug use

LEGAL HISTORY SEARCH GUIDELINES

Checks of all local agencies where a peace officer candidate has lived, worked, or frequented should be conducted to locate any relevant criminal history that does not appear on a DOJ or FBI Rap Sheet. State law PC [§13300\(f\)] requires California law enforcement agencies to furnish, without charge, local criminal history information on all peace officer applicants. Local agency checks should be also conducted for all public safety dispatcher candidates; however, note that non-criminal justice agency dispatcher candidates have different levels of protection for their arrest records.⁵⁴

The circumstances surrounding any candidate's arrest/conviction record, whether adult or juvenile, should be investigated. The conduct that led to an arrest or conviction is in many cases as relevant (if not more) than the presence or absence of an arrest.

The facts surrounding the candidate's present or past involvement in any civil court action should be researched. This requirement applies to peace officer and public safety dispatchers.

Arrest reports and court records should be obtained for both peace officer candidates and public safety dispatcher candidates for law enforcement agencies.

FELONY CONVICTIONS

Any person convicted of a felony (or of a crime in another jurisdiction that would be a felony in California) is prohibited from employment as a California peace officer Government Code [§1029\(a\)]. This prohibition holds even if the conviction was sealed, expunged, or set aside. It may also apply to any convictions that were subsequently reduced to a misdemeanor occurring on or after January 1, 2004.

Proceedings under juvenile court are generally not considered to be a criminal conviction under GC §1029 unless the individual was certified, tried, and convicted as an adult. Therefore, juvenile convictions are not included as a legal bar to appointment as a peace officer. However, the conduct surrounding the offense should certainly be considered as part of the overall background.

There are no similar regulations prohibiting the employment of those convicted of a felony as public safety dispatchers.

⁵³ Peace officer candidates may also be screened through the California Child Abuse Central Index, but an inquiry separate from fingerprinting is required.

⁵⁴ See "Disclosure Provisions" in Chapter 3: "Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework"

MISDEMEANOR CONVICTIONS

Misdemeanor convictions are not, in and of themselves, automatically disqualifying either for peace officers or for public safety dispatchers. However, any conviction should be carefully examined with regard to its relevance to the candidate's suitability for appointment, especially the impact on eligibility to possess a firearm pursuant to either Penal Code §29805 or Title 18 U.S. Code 922\(d\) and \(g\). Note: For peace officer candidates, a firearms clearance letter will be mailed separately from DOJ.

Some persons convicted of offenses have undergone legal proceedings either to seal or expunge a criminal conviction (see Table 5.13: Restoration of Rights). Investigators need to check any returned Rap Sheets for the full details, and it may be necessary to obtain "Minute Orders" from the court of record to determine the factual outcome.

Department policy will largely govern the response to involvement in criminal activity, detentions, arrests, convictions, diversion programs, and even probation. While the PHS covers a wide array of detected and undetected illegal activity - including illegal use of controlled substances - the decision regarding their impact on hiring (apart from issues of legal disqualification under Government Code §1029) rests with the agency.

Agencies may be tempted to deal with each issue and admission on a case-by-case basis; however, this approach can result in claims of disparate treatment, especially against individuals in protected classes (i.e., race, gender, age, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, political affiliation, etc.). A well thought-out and articulated policy in advance of the decision may assist in minimizing the likelihood of accusations and litigation.

SEALED AND EXPUNGED RECORDS

In certain circumstances, applicants may lawfully deny that an arrest (and in some cases even a conviction) ever occurred. Table 5.13 lists circumstances in which a peace officer applicant may lawfully refrain from disclosing arrests and/or convictions that have been sealed, expunged or set aside. Public safety dispatcher applicants are generally exempted from disclosing any legal proceeding that was sealed, expunged or set aside, with the exception of those falling under the Federal Youth Offender Act (18 USC 5038).

It is important to underscore that a sealing or expungement does not relieve the applicant from providing information about the underlying conduct that led to such a sealed or expunged record. (The possible exception might be an arrest/conviction expunged by a court pursuant to PC §851.8, in which case the court made a factual finding of innocence, as there is no underlying conduct to disclose). "Rap Sheets" obtained from DOJ or the FBI are presumptively authoritative records of an individual's history of arrest and/or conviction.

The POST PHS admonishes applicants to obtain legal advice before failing to disclose any arrest and/or conviction. Background investigators must therefore determine whether such information, if discovered, constitutes a material omission of required information, or the exercise of a "release from penalties" right afforded to applicants by law.

 Unless crime of which he/she was convicted involved the use of a dangerous weapon.

PRACTICAL Considerations

In dealing with legal issues, it is important to consider:

- The seriousness of the offense itself
- The age of the candidate at the time of the offense/conduct
- How recently the offense/conduct occurred
- The occupation/career path of the candidate at the time of the offense
- Any mitigating circumstances
- The impact, if any, upon the candidate's potential credibility as a witness in a court of law

CIVIL COURT ACTION

The investigation of a candidate's involvement as a plaintiff or defendant in any civil court action can prove to be very informative. The investigator may want to go so far as to check the civil filing index of the superior courts of counties where the candidate has resided.⁵⁵

RESTRAINING OR STAY-AWAY ORDER

Behavior that led to a restraining or stay-away order placed on a candidate can directly relate to the applicant's suitability for the job. Both the behavior and the circumstances should be thoroughly investigated. Restraining orders associated with allegations of domestic violence appear in the CLETS System DVROS database and should be revealed during any "wants and warrants check."

DIVERSION PROGRAMS

There are many forms of court-ordered diversion programs. Peace officer candidates must report such diversions,⁵⁶ but the reporting requirements are different for non-sworn positions, such as public safety dispatcher. Investigators should consult the specific section of law authorizing the diversion in order to determine whether that proceeding must be reported.

FINGERPRINTING

The submittal of fingerprints is required for both peace officer and public safety dispatcher applicants. Throughout California, paper fingerprint cards have been replaced by Livescan. Agencies that do not have their own Livescan terminal should contract with another agency to provide this service.

Although Livescan responses may return in 24 hours or less, problem records can take upwards of 30 days. Firearms clearance letters are mailed separately. Investigators should carefully read each fingerprint return, as quite often problem records require resubmission or other further action.

Due to the costs associated with fingerprinting candidates, agencies have delayed processing fingerprints. Lengthy or indefinite delays can and have resulted in overlooking the submittal of fingerprints entirely, a fact often detected during the POST compliance audit.

⁵⁶ Participation in diversion programs as a result of simple possession of marijuana occurring five years ago or longer need not be reported (Penal Code §1000).

A copy of the return should be retained in the candidate's personnel record, and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(C\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(C\) specify that a search be made of the Federal Bureau of Investigation records and that a copy of that return should also be retained in the candidate's personnel records. (Note: DOJ policy is that dispatcher candidates at non-criminal justice agencies may not retain these records; only a notation that the search has been conducted and the individual was cleared.)

The California Department of Justice prohibits a hiring agency from using the Automated Criminal History System to investigate a candidate's history of arrest or conviction, or transmitting local criminal history information over the CLETS system for employment purposes.

ILLEGAL DRUG AND ALCOHOL USE

As discussed in Chapter 3, “Legal Qualifications and Statutory Framework,” it is unlawful to make disability-related inquiries prior to making a conditional offer of employment (COE). Protected disabilities include a history of drug addiction or dependence. Therefore, questions that can be expected to elicit this type of information are prohibited pre-offer. This would include questions such as “Have you ever been treated for drug addiction?” or “How many times in your life have you used illegal drugs?”

The PHS includes questions on current and past illegal drug use. The latter question asks candidates to indicate if they: (1) never used any drug recreationally, or (2) tried or used drug(s), but only under limited circumstances (e.g., parties, concerts, etc). Candidates who check box (2) are asked to provide details about their drug use, including drug(s) used, most recent date used, and circumstances. Note that if neither box (1) or (2) is checked, it may be assumed (after ruling out carelessness) that the candidate may have used illegal drugs under more than limited circumstances. However, in compliance with the prohibition on pre-offer disability inquiries, investigating the extent and nature of past illegal drug use should be deferred until the post-offer stage.

Alcoholism — past and current — is a protected disability; therefore, questions about how much a candidate drinks, etc., are not allowable prior to a COE. However, inquiries about job-relevant behavior are permissible, even if that behavior was a result of drunkenness. For example, it is permissible to ask about DUIs, or attendance problems at work because of alcohol use.

PHS Section 9 Motor Vehicle Operation

Commission Regulations 1953(e)(4) and 1959(e)(3) mandate checking the DMV records of both peace officer and public safety dispatcher candidates to determine their driving record and adherence to the law. Although a review of a candidate's driving history is required, the operation of a motor vehicle is neither a state nor a POST requirement for either public safety dispatchers or peace officers. Rather, the review of driving history is intended to provide information regarding the candidate's impulse control/attention to safety, conscientiousness, and other related character attributes.

This section requires candidates to provide information on their driving history, including:

- Driver's license number, state, expiration date, and name under which license was granted.
- License refusals, revocations, etc.
- Traffic citations (excluding parking citations).

- Refusal or revocation of automobile liability insurance.
 - Automobile insurance.
 - Liability coverage (peace officers only).
 - Motor vehicle accidents in the past seven years (peace officers only).

DRIVER'S LICENSE

As mentioned above, possession of a valid driver's license is not a requirement for either peace officer or public safety dispatcher employment, and therefore should not be a condition of employment unless this is an express agency qualification standard (since some peace officers, and many public safety dispatchers are not required to drive a vehicle).

Information on driving records and the status of licenses in California can be obtained by completing DMV Form INF 252 (Appendix E). Completed forms, including the department's Requester Code Number, should be mailed to:

Department of Motor Vehicles
Division of Headquarters Operations Information Services
P.O. Box 944231, Mail Station G201
Sacramento, CA 94244-2310

Under prevailing California Department of Justice policy, California Law Enforcement Telecommunications Systems (CLETS) subscribing agencies may access DMV records via CLETS for their candidates.

If the candidate lived or worked outside of California, out-of-state agencies may be contacted for records, although virtually all states (including California) have purge criteria that may limit driving history information. The amount of time that information remains on a DMV record may be influenced by the driving record itself. As a general rule, in California, infractions remain on a record for 37 months, misdemeanor offenses for seven years, and DUIs and hit-and-run for ten years.

DRIVER'S LICENSE REFUSED

A driver's license may be refused for a number of reasons that may or may not have relevance to suitability for employment as a peace officer or public safety dispatcher. Investigators should inquire into the reason for the refusal of any state to grant a driver's license to the candidate.

VEHICLE INSURANCE

The California Compulsory Financial Responsibility Law requires that operators and owners of motor vehicles be covered by vehicle liability insurance, or place a $35,000 deposit with the Department of Motor Vehicles, or a bond for the same amount. The investigator should determine if candidates are complying with insurance requirements on their vehicles. Note that persons can be covered by their parents' insurance if they drive their parents' vehicle, or if their vehicle is co-registered to their parents. However, they should be named as an additional insured, either generically on the policy or by name.

DRIVING RECORD

The candidate's driving record, in particular the nature and number of moving violations and the number of accidents, can provide useful information about the individual's driving ability as well as other job-relevant personal characteristics. An individual's history of automobile accidents is less likely to be of critical importance for public safety dispatcher candidates, and is therefore not included on that PHS.

In a routine investigation, inquiries should not be made into the number of parking citations the candidate has received, since no precise number of parking citations can be established as being job-relevant. Parking citations are also extremely difficult to track, as many agencies have contracted this function to private organizations. However, the investigator should look into any illegal abuses of the citation process or warrants issued as a result of parking citations.

REVOKED OR SUSPENDED LICENSE

A revoked or suspended driver's license can be very relevant to candidate suitability, especially where such a suspension or revocation resulted from other willful misconduct (i.e., failure to appear, failure to pay a fine).

REFUSED AUTO LIABILITY INSURANCE

The driving history of a candidate who has been refused auto liability insurance must be carefully investigated to determine why the insurance was refused. A candidate's insurability is critical for those agencies where driving is an essential function of the position.

PHS Section 10 Other Topics

The questions in this section ask about a history of physical violence, gang membership, and other behavior associated with anger control problems and anti-social tendencies. Specifically, these items include:

- Denial of a concealed weapons permit.
- Membership or association with criminal enterprises, gangs, or other groups that advocate violence, racism or other forms of bigotry.
- Having a tattoo associated with a criminal enterprise, gang, or other group that advocates violence, racism, or other forms of bigotry.
- History of physical violence.
- History of domestic violence.

TATTOOS

The PHS limits inquiries about tattoos to those that signify affiliation with or membership in criminal enterprises, street gangs, or other groups that advocate violence and/or bigotry. No other questions about tattoos in general should be asked unless they can be shown to be relevant to performing the job. Tattoos that are covered by uniforms, or are never exposed to the public while on duty, should not be the basis for adverse employment actions, absent concurrence with an agency's legal counsel.

Chapter 6

POST COMPLIANCE INSPECTIONS

POST is required by statute (Penal Code §13512) to conduct regularly scheduled inspections to verify that agencies are in compliance with documentation requirements and appointment standards. Records are inspected of those peace officers and public safety dispatchers (whose agencies are in the POST program) for whom a Notice of Appointment (POST 2-114) has been received by POST since the last audit cycle.

Tables 6.1 and 6.2 (located at the end of this chapter) represent the tables of content from the background investigation files (Report Organizer Tabs). Table 6.1 lists the required areas of documentation for peace officer background investigations; Table 6.2 lists the corresponding required areas of documentation for public safety dispatcher background investigations. Prior to July 2009, the individual organizer tabs for peace officer candidates and public safety dispatcher candidates were substantially different. The July 2009 revision to the peace officer and public safety dispatcher selection standards aligned the background investigations of both classifications and removed most of those differences.

The specific documentation requirements for each area are discussed briefly below, including the relevant statute and/or regulation, the focus of the inspector's review, and common oversights/problems encountered during compliance inspections. Where problems/deficiencies are noted during a compliance inspection, POST Regional Consultants will conduct periodic re-checks to ensure that those items have been corrected.

The Report Organizer Tabs can be ordered by contacting POST's Training Delivery & Compliance Bureau at 916 227-4863.

Tab A

BACKGROUND NARRATIVE REPORT

Commission Regulations 1953\(g\) and 1959\(g\)

A narrative report must be compiled by the background investigator and included in the employee's selection file. The narrative must fully address and document all mandated areas of inquiry, and contain sufficient information to allow the hiring authority to make a defensible decision. Complete documentation must be included in the file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Narrative does not provide any detail (e.g., "all references were positive").
- No documentation in file to allow for actual identification of contacts interviewed and what was said.
- Narrative fails to address all mandatory areas of inquiry.
- Failure to retain sufficient documentation and information.

Tab B

PERSONAL HISTORY STATEMENT (POST form or alternative)

Commission Regulations 1953\(c\) and 1959\(c\)

A thoroughly completed Personal History Statement must be contained in the file. The POST forms 2-251 (Peace Officer) or 2-255 (Public Safety Dispatcher) can be used, or an alternative form that includes questions related to the ten areas of investigation listed in Commission Regulations 1953(c) and 1959(c). Completed forms will be reviewed to ensure sufficient personal information to begin and conduct the background investigation [e.g., current and past residences, current and past employment (including unexplained gaps in employment or residences), references, family members].

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Sections of the form are incomplete or inaccurate.
- No signature on last page.
- Candidate has not initialed each page.
- Form is out-of-date.

Tab C

DOJ/FBI FINGERPRINT RETURNS – Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

Government Code §1029\(a\),\(b\) and §1031\(c\), and

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(B\),\(C\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(B\),\(C\)

Results from both Department of Justice and Federal Bureau of Investigation fingerprint checks for criminal history must be in the file. The results must be relevant to the position sought, and conducted prior to but no greater than a year from hire.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Confusing a delay notification with an actual clearance return.
- Reports are more than one year old and/or associated with a different position (e.g., non-sworn, correctional officer).
- Failing to request returns from both DOJ and FBI on the Live Scan request form.

DOJ FIREARMS CLEARANCE – Peace Officers Only

18 USC §922, PC §29805 and Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(B\)

Results from the Department of Justice (DOJ), Bureau of Identification (BID), pertaining to authorization to possess and carry firearms (i.e., Firearms Clearance) must be contained in the file. The DOJ mails the Firearms Clearance separate from the record check (fingerprint return).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Confusing a DOJ concealed weapons print return for reserve officers with a Firearms Clearance: a reserve officer needs the same fingerprint returns as a full-time officer.
- Confusing a delay notification with an actual clearance return.
- Reports are over one-year old and/or associated with a different position (e.g., correctional officer).

Tab D

DRIVING RECORD CHECK

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(4\) and 1959\(e\)\(3\)

Results from the Department of Motor Vehicle or other official driving record must be in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Reports are more than one year old.

Tab E

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCY RECORD CHECKS

PC §13300\(k\), and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(3\)\(A\) and 1959\(e\)\(2\)\(A\)

Returns from checks of records from agencies serving jurisdictions where the candidate has lived, worked, attended school, or had other extended stays should be included in the file. The record check inquiries and responses should be appropriate to the position being sought. The background summary should identify specific names of agencies checked based on information provided in the PHS. Letters from agencies on letterhead are the best evidence of compliance with this requirement. If agencies do not provide a written return, the fact that they were checked should be noted in the narrative. (Note: some agencies restrict – or decline entirely – requests for local criminal history on non-peace officer applicants).

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Missing from file or not covered in narrative.
- Not waiting for all returns.

CREDIT RECORDS CHECK

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(11\) and 1959\(e\)\(10\)

A check of the individual's financial status must be contained in the file. The check should be conducted prior to but no greater than a year before hire.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Reports are more than one year old.
- Report is not from bona fide credit reporting agency.

Tab G

EDUCATION VERIFICATION

GC §1031\(e\) and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(5\) and 1959\(e\)\(4\)

Official transcripts are the only authoritative means of verifying a person's educational background. The transcript shall be an original, a certified copy, or a copy marked "copied from original" that is signed and dated by the background investigator. If any contact was made with current and prior educational institutions attended by the employee, this should be contained in the file too. Peace officer files must contain documentation verifying graduation from either a U.S. high school, accredited DOD high school, or accredited/approved private or nonpublic high school; or verification of passing the GED test or California High School Proficiency Examination; or possession of a two-year, four-year, or advanced degree from an accredited college or university.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Documented education does not correspond/support education claimed on PHS.
- Transcripts are not official.
- Diploma rather than transcript is included.
- Copy of transcript is not certified or lacks notation that it was copied from the original.
- School is not accredited per Government Code §1031(e) – peace officer only.

Tab H

CITIZENSHIP/AGE REQUIREMENTS – Peace Officers

GC §1031\(a\) and \(b\) and Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(1\),\(2\)

Documentation verifying U.S. citizenship and age must be contained in the peace officer's file. Acceptable evidence includes an official U.S. birth certificate, naturalization documentation, or citizenship documentation. The documents shall be an original, a certified copy, or an investigator-attested copy.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Certificate is not issued by a government agency.
- Certificate is not a certified or investigator-attested to copy of a certified birth certificate.
- U.S. passport is not necessarily proof of citizenship.
- For candidates who are not yet citizens, failing to include proof of application for citizenship and legal resident alien card.

EMPLOYMENT ELIGIBILITY – Public Safety Dispatchers

– 8 USC §1324a and Commission Regulation 1959\(e\)\(1\)

Documentation verifying employment eligibility must be contained in the public safety dispatcher's file. Acceptable evidence includes U.S. birth certificate, naturalization documentation, or current permanent resident alien card.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Work Authorization is expired.
- Documentation does not support right to work.

Tab I

MILITARY HISTORY CHECK

50 USC Appendix §462 and Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(10\) and 1959\(e\)\(9\)

Verification of military service (DD-214) or verification of Selective Service registration, if appropriate, must be in the file. Selective Service registration is required for all males (excluding the sons of foreign diplomats) born on or after January 1, 1960.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Document submitted is not DD-214 Long Form.
- No documentation is offered for willful failure to register.

Tab J

DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE CHECK

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(8\) and 1959\(e\)\(7\)

Evidence of dissolution of previous marriage(s) must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Failure to include court-issued final divorce decree in the file.

EMPLOYMENT HISTORY CHECKS

Commission Regulations 1953\(e\)\(6\) and 1959\(e\)\(5\)

Documented verification of contact with previous employers must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Insufficient number of employers contacted.

Tab L

RELATIVES/PERSONAL REFERENCES CHECKS

Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(7\) and 1959\(e\)\(6\)

Documented verification of contact with personal references must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Documentation of source and information not included in file.

Tab M

NEIGHBORHOOD CHECKS

Commission Regulation 1953\(e\)\(9\) and 1959\(e\)\(8\)

Documented verification of contact with current and past neighbors must be contained in the file.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Residential history included instead of actual contacts with current/former neighbors.
- No checks of past residences.

Tab N

MEDICAL CLEARANCE – Peace Officers and Public Safety Dispatchers

GC §1031\(f\) and Commission Regulations 1954\(e\) and 1960\(e\)

Documented verification that the medical examination was conducted according to statute/regulation must be contained in the file. This document must be signed by the examining physician, and should include his/her license number, the date the examination took place, that it met appropriate statutory/regulatory requirements, and that the individual was found suitable for employment. A copy of the letter is permissible, if the original is maintained by the agency's human resources department. The actual medical report shall not be kept in the background file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Certificate of suitability not signed by physician.
- Confidential medical information in file.

- Certificate more than one year old prior to date of employment/appointment.
- No documentation in file; merely a note that clearance letter is kept at HR.

PSYCHOLOGICAL CLEARANCE – Peace Officers Only

GC §1031\(f\) and Commission Regulation 1955\(e\)

Documented verification that the psychological examination was conducted according to statute/regulation must be contained in the peace officer's file. This document must be signed by the examining psychologist, and should include his/her license number, the date the examination took place, that it met statutory/regulatory requirements, and that the individual was found suitable for employment. A copy of the letter is permissible, if the original is maintained by the agency's human resources department. The actual psychological report shall not be kept in the background file.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Certificate of suitability not signed by psychologist.
- Confidential psychological information in file.
- No documentation in file; merely a note that clearance letter is kept at HR.

Appendix A

DEVELOPMENT OF POST BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION DIMENSIONS

The creation of the POST background investigation dimensions resulted from a review of multiple job analyses of both the peace officer and public safety dispatcher position, including the 1977 and 1998 job analyses from which the previous background dimensions were derived, a personality-based peace officer job analysis conducted by POST in 2003 which led to the development of psychologically-based job dimensions, a 2003 project by the Department of Justice on Community Oriented Policing, and a 2002 POST study leading to the creation of oral interview factors.

An additional rich source of information about both job classifications was provided by the O*NET database. Created in 1999 by the U.S. Department of Labor, this interactive database includes information on tasks, skills, abilities, knowledge, work activities, and attributes for 1,122 occupations, including police patrol officer and police, fire, and ambulance dispatchers. Because the O*NET assesses all occupations against the same set of criteria, it provides a very effective means for comparing peace officer and dispatcher worker attributes.

Table A.1 on the next page lists 21 O*NET job requirements and attributes most relevant to background investigations. The importance of these attributes for peace officers and public safety dispatchers are extremely similar; only a few percentage points separate the ratings for virtually every characteristic. These results serve to demonstrate that, despite the fact that peace officers and public safety dispatchers involve very different duties and tasks, these two occupations are strikingly similar with respect to many worker requirements.

Given this similarity, one common set of ten background dimensions was created for peace officers and public safety dispatchers. The dimensions are organized into five major categories (Moral Character, Handling Stress and Adversity, Work Habits, Interactions with Others, and Intellectually-Based Abilities). These dimensions are fully described in Chapter 2, Peace Officer and Public Safety Dispatcher Background Investigation Dimensions.

SUBJECT: CONDITIONAL OFFER OF EMPLOYMENT

Dear Mr./Ms. _____:

This letter constitutes a conditional offer of employment as a _____ [Position] _____ with the _____ [Agency Name] _____ Department. However, a final, unconditional job offer will be made only upon successful completion of each and every one of the following:

1. A psychological screening in accordance with California Government Code §1031(f) and guidelines established by the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training;
2. A medical screening in accordance with the provisions of Government Code Sections 1031, 12940 and the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training.
3. Completion of the background investigation pursuant to California Government Code §1031(d), to include information that was neither legal nor practical to obtain prior to the extension of this offer, or in response to issues that arose subsequent to this offer.

Should you be unsuccessful in any of the above evaluations, this job offer is revoked.

Due to some expected attrition of candidates who either resign or are removed from the eligibility list at the post-offer stage, the number of conditional job offers extended may exceed the number of immediate vacancies. If this happens, you may be placed in a candidate pool and will be extended an offer of employment as soon as a vacancy arises.

THEREFORE, DO NOT GIVE NOTICE, QUIT YOUR PRESENT EMPLOYMENT OR RELOCATE UNTIL YOU HAVE BEEN OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED THAT YOU HAVE SUCCESSFULLY COMPLETED THE MEDICAL EXAMINATION AND YOUR HIRE DATE HAS BEEN CONFIRMED.

Sincerely,

[Name]

Sample B.2Sample Form for UseADVISEMENT TO CANDIDATE REGARDING FALSE STATEMENTSADVISEMENT TO CANDIDATE
REGARDING FALSE STATEMENTSCANDIDATE NAME:

The overall purpose of the pre-employment background investigation is to verify that your application and any statements you have made to your prospective employer concerning your qualifications are true.

The California courts have held that an employer has a legal duty to know the persons whom it employs. In some cases, California law may mandate a background investigation before employment, while in other cases it is merely a case of public policy or prudence before placing someone in a position of public trust.

Both State and Federal courts have also held that there is an absolute necessity for public employees to be truthful. You must understand that a lack of truthfulness or deception of any type on your part will automatically and irrevocably result in your application being rejected from further consideration.

For some people, there may be one or more incidents or occurrences in their background which they regret or over which they may feel some embarrassment. A prospective employer will not make inquiries into areas of a person's background that have no legitimate bearing on their qualifications for the job. You should understand that the mere presence of so-called "negative" information in your background is not automatically disqualifying. For example, an applicant may have engaged in petty thievery as a child, used illegal drugs, been fired from a job, or been convicted of a crime as an adult. While these things in and of themselves may not automatically remove that person from consideration for a job, lying about them will.

A pre-employment background investigation is not intended to be an intimidating experience or an unwarranted invasion into your privacy. Your background investigator will contact persons who know you, including present and/or former employers, and will examine official documents and records concerning you to assure that you have been honest in your application and to fulfill the legal mandates imposed by the courts and legislature. The more forthright you have been, the greater the likelihood that your background can be completed in a timely and successful manner.

CERTIFICATION

I understand that any false statement and/or deliberate misrepresentations, whether by omission or commission, will result in my application being automatically and irrevocably rejected from further consideration. I certify that I have read the above statement, understand its contents and have been furnished a copy of it.

ADVISEMENT TO PEACE OFFICERS
SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT

California Government Code §1031 prohibits the employment of persons who are not of good moral character or who are not fit to serve as peace officers. This legal prohibition applies equally to persons seeking employment as peace officers, as well as to persons already employed as peace officers seeking appointment with another agency.

STATEMENT

You will undergo a rigorous, in-depth background investigation as a result of your application for this position. In the event that your background investigation for this position should uncover information that you have, or are suspected of having been engaged in illegal activities while employed as a peace officer, this information will likely bar you from further consideration for this position. Further, in the event that this illegal activity occurred during the time of your present employment as a peace officer, or if this background investigation should uncover information which raises questions about your fitness to continue as a peace officer, this information may be transmitted to your present employer for their independent investigation.

SEEKING LATERAL PLACEMENT

California Code of Rules and Regulations, Title 11 §1959 [enacted pursuant to California Penal Code §13510(c)] prohibits the employment of persons who exhibit past behavior incompatible with the performance of the duties of a public safety dispatcher. This legal prohibition applies equally to persons seeking employment as public safety dispatchers, as well as to persons already employed as public safety dispatchers seeking appointment with another agency.

STATEMENT

You will undergo a rigorous, in-depth background investigation as a result of your application for this position. In the event that your background investigation for this position should uncover information that you have, or are suspected of having been engaged in illegal activities while employed as a public safety dispatcher, this information will likely bar you from further consideration for this position. Further, in the event that this illegal activity occurred during the time of your present employment as a public safety dispatcher, or if this background investigation should uncover information which raises questions about your fitness to continue as a public safety dispatcher, this information may be transmitted to your present employer for independent investigation.

A Background Narrative Report – Commission Regulation 1953(g)

- (1) The background investigator shall summarize the background investigation results in a narrative report that includes sufficient information for the reviewing authority to extend, as appropriate, a conditional offer of employment. The report, along with all supporting documentation obtained during the course of the background investigation, shall be included in the candidate's background investigation file. The supporting documents shall be originals or true, current and accurate copies as attested to by the background investigator. The background investigation file shall be made available during POST compliance inspections.
- (2) Retention. The background narrative report and supporting documentation shall be retained in the individual's background investigation file for as long as the individual remains in the department's employ. Additional record retention requirements are described in Government Code § 12946.

Common Oversights/Problems:

- Narrative does not provide any detail (e.g., "all references were positive").
- No documentation in file to allow for actual identification of contacts interviewed and what was said.
- Narrative fails to address all mandatory areas of inquiry.
- Failure to retain sufficient documentation and information.

RELATIVES, REFERENCES, AND ACQUAINTANCES

No disqualifying information. The applicant enjoys the full and unreserved support of her parent and stepparent, who describe her as a compassionate, mentally strong, honest, personable, and thoughtful individual whose interest in this field dates back to childhood. The only criticism of the applicant centers on her tendency to be self-critical and her time management skills with regard to her child.

The balance of the applicant's references is a mixture of professional acquaintances and social peers, all of whom recommended her for this position. Several expressed initial surprise at her interest in police work, but the applicant is characterized as someone who is truthful, loyal, dedicated, compassionate, athletic, professional, possesses high integrity, and not "heavy-handed."

Criticisms of the applicant ranged from her small stature to her being soft spoken and her not working out more (physically). She is also seen as someone who is too much the perfectionist, yet not always organized.

EDUCATION

No disqualifying information. The applicant reportedly meets the educational requirements of this position. The applicant claims she is a 1992 graduate of Hometown High School, but only a facsimile diploma has been received in support of that claim (TAB G).

RESIDENCES

No disqualifying information. The applicant resides in a home owed by her stepfather, which she shares with her child. Although neighbors report never even having seen the applicant, her residence has not been the source of any problems.

EMPLOYMENT

No disqualifying information. The applicant is presently employed as a Food Server for a restaurant, a position she has held for the last five months. The applicant is characterized as a good worker who will be eligible for rehire.

The balance of the applicant's employment history consists of 11 positions within the last 10 years. She has worked as a Commodity Manager, "VAM" Procurement Specialist, Buyer/Planner II, Purchasing Assistant III, Claims Processor, three times as a Temporary Worker, and twice as a Cashier. What little information there was available was generally positive.

MILITARY No disqualifying information. The applicant reports she has not served in the Armed Forces, and she was not required to be registered under the Selective Service Registration Act.
FINANCIAL No disqualifying information. The applicant has twenty-two reported credit accounts and has satisfied them on a timely basis. The obligations reported on her Personal History Statement (PHS) form are roughly consistent with those which appear on her credit report (TAB F).
LEGAL No disqualifying information. The applicant's fingerprints have been submitted to the Department of Justice by the Anytown Police Department, and they have conducted her local criminal history checks as well (TABS C & E). The applicant initially reported no involvement with illegal acts within the required reporting. However, during her independent polygraph examination she reported having used marijuana most recently at age 20 (on the edge of the seven year reporting requirement) and having been detained by Arizona police for drinking and was released to her stepfather.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY		Page 1 of 1
ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS
The completed background investigation of Police Officer Applicant Janie Smith revealed no disqualifying information. Apart from the dearth of available employment information, the areas of investigative concern center on the applicant's Conscientiousness and Willingness to Confront Problems.
CONSCIENTIOUSNESS
Although characterized by others as conscientious, certain other factors belie that description. The applicant was initially disqualified on her background after inconsistencies on her PHS were compared to admissions on her polygraph. Although these matters were addressed by the Department, the issue is raised again by the fact that the applicant has failed to furnish all of the documents (high school transcripts) which she had been instructed to furnish (and acknowledged in writing). Without those transcripts, it is not possible to demonstrate her legal eligibility for appointment. The applicant also reports having been employed in 1992 at the Walgreen's in Anyville, Arizona, but store officials dispute her claim. It has not been established if the applicant simply failed to devote enough time to accurately complete her form, or if there is another reason. Her parents have suggested that time management is not one of her strengths.
CONFRONTING AND OVERCOMING PROBLEMS, OBSTACLES AND ADVERSITY
Some of the applicant's references expressed some surprise at her interest in a police career, pointing to the combination of her small stature, soft-spoken nature, and willingness to back down when challenged. She is also seen by some as a person who is overly self-critical, so should she be conditionally offered employment with the Department, her psychological assessment may be especially important in assessing this job dimension. This background and the completed Investigation Narrative are based solely on the interviews, and supporting documentation is appended herein.

CANDIDATE NAME:		JANIE SMITH
Employer:	1) TRIPLE PLAY SPORTS GRILL Donald Mandel, Owner
Contact Date:	10-12-06
	No disqualifying information. The applicant has been employed there as a Food Server since May 6 of this year. The applicant will be eligible for rehire. The applicant's personnel file does not contain any performance evaluations, disciplinary actions or commendations. The applicant's original application listed only her address and previous employer. Mandel reported that his brother-in-law, Eric Tracey who is a co-owner, is not available for comment, and co-workers "do not know anything" and should not be contacted on the job or at home. Mandel reported that he "respectfully" does not wish to state whether he would recommend the applicant for this position, adding that there is "nothing negative." He just does not feel "exposure" as a food server is the same as what a police officer would face. Mandel reported that the applicant responds well to criticism and direction, and she gets along very well with co-workers. The applicant is punctual, reliable, hardworking, customer service oriented, and he considers her a good employee who has no negative areas. The applicant follows restaurant policies, and observes safety rules, she uses her work time constructively, shows initiative when appropriate, and she keeps Mandel informed of problems that deserve his attention. The applicant has lost her temper at work, but Mandel would not elaborate. Mandel also reported that the applicant has never exhibited any racial or ethnic bigotry, and she dresses appropriately for work.

Additional references, provided by the initial contacts, shall also be contacted and interviewed to determine whether the candidate has exhibited behavior incompatible with the position sought. Sufficient information shall be collected and reviewed to determine candidate suitability.*

(B) Proof of reference checks shall be documented by written information showing that relatives and personal references identified by the candidate were interviewed. Documentation shall include the identity of each individual contacted, the contact's relationship to the candidate, and an account of the information provided by the contact. All requests for information shall be documented.

Common Oversight/Problem:

- Documentation of source and information not included in file.

CANDIDATE NAME:		JANIE SMITH
Relative:	1) KATHLEEN and ROBERT SMITH – Parent and Step-parent
Contact Date:	10-10-06
	No disqualifying information. The Smiths report that the applicant has fully discussed this position with them, and they expressed no reservations, (apart from the natural concerns about the dangers inherent in the job). The applicant has been interested in this line of work since childhood and appears to have developed interest through an uncle who was a police officer. The applicant's best qualities will be her compassionate, thoughtful and personable nature, her honesty, and the fact that she is “mentally strong.” Mrs. Smith reports that the applicant is “not a good liar,” and she goes out of her way to assist others, while Mr. Smith notes that she knows what she wants and works for it. The only areas in which they feel the applicant could improve herself would be to be less hard on herself or not have such high expectations, to give herself credit, and to improve her time management skills with her child. The Smiths report that the applicant is most concerned about finding gainful employment and is most easily bothered by the mistreatment of people or animals or by her siblings not being more respectful to their mother. In these situations, the applicant will speak her mind or work it out on her own, but sometimes cries when she is angry. Mr. Smith reports that “nothing comes to mind” with regard to any problems with the applicant in her youth, and Mrs. Smith reports that the applicant was insecure about her looks in junior high and high school. She notes that the applicant “acted out” and wanted attention from boys. However, both reported that the applicant accepted discipline when it was deserved. The applicant has given them no reason to doubt her ability to successfully perform the essential functions of this position. She uses physical exercise such as running, using a treadmill, yoga, and activities with her son as a means of keeping fit and for the release of stress.
Personal Relationship:	2) MICHAEL McFARLAND – Ex-significant Other
Contact Date:	10-11-06
	No information. The applicant reports that he is the father of her child, but she has had no contact with him in ten years. He declined further comment.

Professional: Contact Date:	3) RANDY HIGHLAND – Home Theater Installer 10-11-06 No disqualifying information. Highland reports having met the applicant some ten years ago through work at COMPAQ. Highland reports that they dated for a while, and he is the “acting dad” to the applicant’s child. They see one another daily in that context. Highland reports that he was initially surprised at her interest in this job. However, she has expressed that this has been a “dream of hers”, she wants to “assist those who need,” and he recommends her for this position. The applicant has been truthful, hardworking and loyal throughout their acquaintance. Highland also reports that the applicant has never exhibited any racial or ethnic bigotry, there were never any “domestic issues” in their relationship, and Highland could not recall ever having seen her really become angry. Highland reports she has borrowed money and his car, and both were returned “fine.” The applicant is a “good” driver who maintains an alert state while driving. The applicant has not received any citations or been involved in any collisions. Highland could not recall the applicant having driven while intoxicated, and he is also certain the applicant does not abuse drugs. Highland expressed some concern over the applicant’s ability to successfully perform the essential functions of this position due to her size “5-2, 120.” Highland reports that the applicant runs to maintain her physical fitness, but he also felt that she should take a karate course because of her small stature.
Personal Best Friend: Contact Date:	4) CAROLYN HOOPER – Homemaker 10-15-06 No disqualifying information. Hooper reports that the applicant and she have been acquainted for more than seven years. They met through Hooper’s fiancé, who worked with the applicant. They see one another a few times each week in social settings or at family events. Hooper also expressed initial surprise at the applicant’s applying for this job. Hooper characterized the applicant as someone who “will not stab you in the back,” and she considers her a “good role model for her son.” The applicant is also up-front, loyal, and dedicated.

Personal Best Friend: #4 cont'd	There has never been any reason to doubt the applicant's honesty or to suspect her of any racial or ethnic bigotry. Hooper reports that she has seen the applicant become upset with her son, but never physically violent. Hooper recommends the applicant for this position, adding that the applicant has stated this has been her “childhood dream.” The applicant is a “good” driver who maintains an alert state while driving. Hooper reports that the applicant has attended traffic school, but she is not aware of any details. She has never seen the applicant drive while intoxicated, in fact, the applicant will call for a ride if she has been drinking. There has been no evidence of substance abuse on the applicant’s part, according to Hooper. When asked if the applicant would be able to successfully perform the essential functions of this position, Hooper replied, “I think she is capable.” Hooper reports that the applicant bike rides, takes yoga, and runs to maintain her physical fitness. Hooper reports that the applicant speaks softly and will back down; this is the one area in which she felt the applicant could improve. Hooper feels the applicant should be more outspoken and aggressive. However, Hooper did not consider this to be disqualifying.
Personal: Contact Date:	5) MARIA GONZALEZ – Buyer 10-15-06 No disqualifying information. Gonzalez reports having known the applicant for nearly nine years and met her through work at Dot Hill Unlimited. They now see one another in social settings several times each month. Gonzalez described the applicant as a responsible individual who is loyal and dedicated. Gonzalez reports that, although it “seems otherwise,” the applicant possesses a “strong attitude” and can be judgmental. The applicant is someone whom Gonzalez would feel comfortable entrusting with her own personal safety, and she has never had any reason to doubt the applicant’s honesty. For these reasons, Gonzalez reports she is willing to recommend the applicant for this position. Gonzalez reported being unaware of any reason the applicant could not successfully perform the essential functions of this position. The applicant runs and goes to a gym “off and on” to maintain her physical fitness. The applicant is a “very alert” driver who has not been involved in any collisions or received any citations of which Gonzalez reports being aware. Gonzalez reports the applicant has never driven while intoxicated, and there has never been any evidence of substance abuse on the applicant’s part, either. If there was any area in which the applicant could improve herself, it would be to not be hard on herself. Gonzalez reports that the applicant “wants things perfect,” and tends to put herself down.

Personal:	6) NANCY JOHNSON – Administrative Assistant
Contact Date:	10-20-06
	No disqualifying information. Johnson reports having known the applicant for nearly nine years and first met her at Dot Hill Unlimited. Johnson reports they have remained in contact on a social basis and see one another about twice each month. The applicant is well suited for this position, according to Johnson. The applicant has demonstrated an ability to be friendly, open-minded, and she possesses a positive attitude. She adds that the applicant is willing to try new things, she is athletic, and she is a good mother. There has never been any reason to doubt the applicant's honesty or to suspect her of any racial or ethnic biases. Johnson did not feel the applicant has any areas of needed improvement. The applicant is not easily flustered, and Johnson could not recall ever having seen her really become angry, other than occasional “boyfriend problems.” The applicant is a “good” driver who maintains an alert state while driving. Johnson reported being unaware of any citations or collisions involving the applicant. Johnson also reported never having seen the applicant drive while intoxicated, nor has she shown any evidence of substance abuse. Johnson is confident the applicant will do well, and have no problems successfully performing the essential functions of this position since she works out regularly to maintain her level of fitness.
Personal:	7) ROBIN FERGUSON – Contract Manager
Contact Date:	10-21-06
	No disqualifying information. Ferguson reported that the applicant and she met through their sons’ Little League team nearly three years ago. They have since become friends and see one another a few times each month in social settings. Ferguson has always found the applicant to be an honest individual who is responsible, and “she wants to help people.” The applicant has follow through abilities, she is trustworthy, and she deals with everyone on a professional level. The applicant appears to handle stress well and is not easily angered. The applicant has discussed interest in this position, noting that this has been a long term goal of hers. Ferguson feels comfortable recommending the applicant, pointing out that there are no obvious areas in which the applicant needs to improve.

Sackett reports that he has known the applicant for only eighteen months. They first met as co-workers at VA Linux and have since become social friends. They now see one another two or three time each month in social settings. Sackett described the applicant as an honest individual who has never given any indication of substance abuse. The applicant has also been even-tempered and able to get along with people of diverse backgrounds. Sackett feels the applicant's best qualities are her friendly manner, her hardworking nature, and her dedication. Sackett reports that the applicant “won’t be heavy handed,” and she tries to reconcile things. For these reasons Sackett is willing to recommend the applicant for this position, even though he reports he was initially surprised at her applying for this position. Sackett denies being aware of any areas in which the applicant could improve. However, he reports he has seen the applicant become upset over “trivial matters.” Sackett reports that he has no reason to doubt the applicant’s ability to successfully perform the essential functions of this position. The applicant maintains her physical fitness through running.
Professional: Contact Date:	10) JEREMY DEMAS – Food Server 10-20-06	No disqualifying information. Demas reports that he and the applicant have been working together at the Triple-Play Grill for the past five months. While Demas recommends her for this position, he expressed some surprise at her interest in being a police officer. The applicant is someone whom he finds rather timid around strangers. This is not a problem where they work, and the applicant can be a very warm and friendly person “once you get to know her.” Demas has seen no evidence of racial or ethnic bigotry on the applicant’s part, and there has been no reason to doubt her personal honesty, either. Demas added that “I just have a hard time seeing her as a cop,” but, “maybe her training will bring that out in her.”

Professional: Contact Date:	11) PETER CHANG – Food Server 10-24-06	No disqualifying information. Chang reports that he and the applicant have actually known one another since they were high school classmates, and they now work together at the Triple-Play Grill. He recommends her as a police officer. Chang feels the applicant is someone who is extremely compassionate and interested in helping people. “She wants to make a difference” and feels that this is the career in which she can accomplish this. The applicant has been a good friend and a good co-worker, throughout the time they have known one another. Chang concedes that the applicant can be a little disorganized from time to time, but he does not believe this will impact her work as a police officer. He believes the applicant will be the type of police officer who never gets the City sued. The applicant was arrested as a teenager, Chang recalled, but it was nothing more than a “high school party when somebody called the cops.” He doubts she has ever had any other trouble with the police, and he considers her impeccably honest.
Professional: Contact Date:	12) JEANETTE AHMAD – Systems Administrator 10-24-06	No disqualifying information. Ahmad reports that she and the applicant worked together at Compaq Computers for nearly one year. Although they rarely see one another now, they keep in contact by e-mail. Ahmad expressed some surprise at the applicant’s interest in being a police officer, adding that “she’s pretty tiny to be a cop.” At the same time, however, the applicant used to work out in the company gym, so she assumes that she will be able to successfully perform the essential functions of this position. Ahmad considered the applicant to be a very honest person, and she was never one to express any racial or ethnic bigotry. She was also a very loyal friend, and they were known as the “Two Amigos” at Compaq. The applicant can be trusted to keep a secret, and she was “always there” whenever she was needed. In fact, Ahmad reports she was “my Maid of Honor at my wedding.”
